will not again be a time when labor is overworked and underpaid. We are as far from any such desire as Mr. Gompers, but neither Mr. Gompers nor any one else need be deluded in the belief that wages alone will remain high...

Answering a Question. We have the following from an advocate of the league of nations without reservations: "Recently you stated that there were some 25 wars going on at the present time in which the United States was not involved, and which it would be if it were a member of the league of nations..."

Aside from Mr. Gompers' quarrel with "normalcy" as an etymological monstrosity, we can not see that its advent, not a return to "old conditions" would be other than beneficial. Certainly it is more desirable than "abnormalcy" which has brought comfort to no one who lives by the sweat of his face.

Get the Gamblers. The scores of boys that crowded about Joe Jackson when he emerged from the Cook county grand jury room in Chicago and testified to their faith in their idol by pleading with him to tell them that "it isn't so," exemplified the spirit of thousands of fans-lovers of clean sport—the country over, who would never have believed it if Joe had not confessed; and like the small boys they were praying—"pulling for him," they called it—that he would come through unscathed.

Article 17 provides that "any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any member of the league or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations."

Whether the warring states have declined to enter the league, or whether they have not been invited to do so, we do not know. But in any event, under the covenant of the league, if its provisions are adhered to, there can be no such thing as war or threat of war without immediately affecting every member of the league.

"Normalcy." Mr. Gompers was characteristically pungent when he declared in response to Senator Harding's lament for the return of "normalcy" that the word and the condition were obsolete; but his sentiment scarcely will be concurred in outside the ranks of philologists and radicals, with whom Mr. Gompers happily has escaped classification.

How Harding Took It. "As soon as the tenth ballot was over and the nomination confirmed I made my way through the rear of the platform where I had been in the legitimate custody of a writer who spoke to me and shake my hand, but my recollection of that is somewhat hazy. I remember that the first thing I did was to locate Mrs. Harding in the lower gallery where she was seated with me and my party."
