How the Nebraska University Professors Teach the Students Politics.

SERIOUS CHARGES PREFERRED.

The Missouri Pacific Pushing Its State Extensions—The Capitol Grounds Improvement—State House Notes.

FROM THE BEE'S LINCOLN BUREAU.

The state organ of the prohibitionists, published in this city, the New Republic, in its last issue comes out with serious and what seems to be substantial charges against the state university, for its meddlesome methods in politics and attempts to herd the students and vote them as a few of the professors dictate.

The Missouri Pacific is pushing its state extensions. The Capitol grounds improvement is being carried out. State house notes are provided.

Extending the Missouri Pacific. During the present season the Missouri Pacific railroad will build westward from Lincoln after its share in Nebraska projects in the active right of way.

At the state house. One of the coming improvements at the state house that will be appreciated by the Lincoln populace will be the improvement of the grounds of the capitol building.

The city is now under the guardianship of the city council. The object of this meeting is to consider a plan for advertising the city through the east that has been formulated by Messrs. J. D. Calhoun and Sam D. Cox.

The belt line surveyors are pushing preliminary work and have already run a line from West Lincoln to the asylum and penitentiary.

Grant, Beecher and Eads. Evening Wisconsin: Within the past two years the nation has lost three of its most distinguished men.

Two of these men were born and reared in the west. One was born at the east, but he spent his youth and early manhood in the west.

All were broad men, commensurate with the vastness of the country with which they were growing up.

EPITAPHS AND EULOGIES.

Scraping the Moss From Some Very Ancient Graveyard Stones.

MANY MILDEWY MEMORIALS. Husbands' Tributes to Wives Departed—Old Maids Remembered—Paupers and Beggars in Rhyme—Joy and Sorrow.

Time was when epitaphs were elaborate sermons, when eulogies to "God's best gift" were of many words.

Just how soul-trying, how difficult this condensation, this boiling down as it were, of the joyous reminiscences in the life of a hen-pecked Petruchio.

Under this stone, a lump of clay, Lies a man, should share the earth, Who on the 24th of May, Began to hold his tongue.

Again, see the calm resignation of a bereaved husband of Cleopatra, who, after the date of her death, had placed on his wife's tombstone this touching epitaph:

There was a great calm. Next in the lugubrious procession comes a stricken Welsman, and in the following epitaph to his "better half" tells of the sweetest spot on earth, and why so dear:

This spot is the sweetest I've seen in my life. For it raises my flowers and covers my grief. Imagine, if you can, the genuine grief of a modern philosopher who epitomized his irreproachable loss in this couplet:

Here lies my Xantippe, let her lie; She finds repose at last and so do I. It is a libel on woman to charge that she talks too much.

It is a libel on woman to charge that she talks too much, but if she is censurable for this, then man should share the censure, because it is into his ready ear that woman's unchained eloquence is poured.

THE PAUPER, OR THE WOODMAN, TO EACH OF WHOM IS GIVEN A PARTING SHOT ON THE TOMB.

The brother. Erected to the memory of John Smith, who died on the 15th of March, 1887, as a mark of affection, by his brother.

The bumster. Here lie the remains of Caleb Humm, by trade a bum. When Caleb died, he said: "Come, Caleb, come!" The photographer: Here I lie, taken from life.

The pauper. Here I lie at the charnel door; The further in the more to pay; Here I lie as warm as they.

The woodman. The tree was good, I was lopping wood, And down fell from a tree; I met with a check and broke my neck, And so death lopped off me.
