I. O. G. T. Convention. Delegates from the various lodges of the twelfth Good Templar district met in this city yesterday afternoon.

This district is composed of the counties of Pottawattamie, Harrison, Shelby, Audubon, Mills and Cass. The following officers were chosen: District C. T.—O. L. Barrett, of Crescent.

District Com.—Annie Shultz, Missouri Valley. District J. T.—Allie F. Heyward, Coey.

District V. T.—Clara B. Connors, Hancock. District Secretary—A. B. Mair, Council Bluffs.

District Treasurer—F. N. Keeny, Shelby. District Chaplain—Rev. J. H. Wetwood, Missouri Valley.

District Marshal—A. M. Fyranado, Magnolia. District Guard—J. R. Bell, Council Bluffs.

District Sentinel—W. J. Trotter, Avoca. Department Marshal—Mary Barnyte, Council Bluffs.

District Assistant Secretary—H. J. Clark, Council Bluffs. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Certain peace officers of this district have for the past few months either openly extended official clemency to violators of the prohibitory law, or clandestinely given them aid and comfort in the way of "cooked service" of papers held for service against them, therefore,

Resolved, That we demand of all peace officers full and complete recognition at their hands of their sworn duty in the matter of enforcement of the prohibitory statute, as well as all other laws.

It was also resolved to ask of the legislature that the sale of tobacco to children be prohibited, also that it is the duty of the next legislature to repeal the present pharmacy law, or so amend it that drug stores shall not be whisky shops.

Eleven of the thirteen lodges in this district had delegates in the convention, representing a membership of 622. An examination of the rolls of the lodges showed 267 ladies members and 294 gentlemen, a fact that refuted the often advanced assertion that by far the greater number of Good Templars are women.

There are fifteen districts in the state with a total membership of over 10,000. In one district twenty subordinate lodges have been organized since the session of the grand lodge in August last. The executive committee has employed Captain O. R. Van Etten to thoroughly canvass this district.

The next meeting of the convention will be held at Avoca on the third Thursday in February. At the Opera House. Last evening the "I. O. G. T. had an open meeting, or a "temperance rally," at Dohane's opera house. The house was well filled.

Chief Templar O. L. Barrett acted as chairman. The exercises opened with a song and prayer by the Rev. W. H. Rees, of the Broadway Methodist church.

E. R. Hutchins, of Des Moines, was the first speaker. He thought it was a good omen that in a city where the prohibitory law was openly defied that so much interest in the work of enforcement was taken by its citizens.

Council Bluffs has shaken hands with the cities of the northwest, and the boundary of the law. This city has two lodges of the order of I. O. G. T. pledged to abstinence in personal habits and the enforcement of prohibition in the state, and the residents here ought to be thankful for this situation.

In the midst of this ritual states the objects of this organization to be to reclaim the fallen and save others from falling. There are those here who would and ought to give the order, with its noble objects, the most cordial support.

"Do you know how Iowa is regarded abroad?" In answer he said a prominent English clergyman had told him that Iowa's splendid victory and constant fight in the line of temperance reform has done more for the cause of temperance in England than the record of all the other states in the union combined.

"Five years ago the people in this state decided by a majority of 30,000 against the saloon, and every year since then has reaffirmed that decision, and as our governor has said so say I: 'The child is yet unborn who shall witness the repeal of the prohibitory law.'"

The speaker here went into the details of the saloon work in the state and the nation. In answer to the question that prohibition does not prohibit, that where it does prohibit it ruins the city, he said: "Both statements are false. While it does not stop selling and drinking absolutely it does to a large extent do so. All laws are prohibitory. Those of the decalogue and those upon the statute books of the world are so, but these are constantly broken. Why don't you ask that they be repealed upon the basis of truth?"

"He said there was not a single saloon in Des Moines, and there is more money on deposit in the banks there than the wage workers of the city from there has been during any five years under license law. If prohibition does not prohibit, it is equal to true that regulation does not regulate. Minors and drunkards can both buy whisky wherever license law exists. Some people say the saloon business is legitimate and ought to be recalled. No business is legitimate if it does not do good to the community. That is a principal of political economy. The speaker referred to many lines of business activity showing the equivalent rendered for the use of brains and capital, and then asked to be shown a thing benefiting society or the individual is the product of the saloon. 'If the saloon is a good thing, let us have it. Let the saloon-keeper take that boy of yours and for thirty days fill him up with beer, whisky and rum, and then send him to the state fair as a product of his industry. Why don't he do it?'"

He stated that more appeals came to him (as commissioner of labor statistics) from the wage-workers for the enforcement of the prohibitory law than for any other thing. In closing he made a strong appeal for enforcement in this city.

For an elegant birthday gift or Christmas present, a Domestic sewing machine leads them all.

SHE WAS OF ROYAL BLOOD. The Sad End of Kate Murphy—Reared in Luxury.

Says a Louisville dispatch: A remarkable career was closed with the death yesterday of Mrs. Kate Murphy Anderson. Born of parents closely connected to a royal family, reared in luxury, taught by masters, and graduated from one of the great academies of Europe with high honors, a young lady full of promise and the prospect of a bright future, married to wealth and at last an old woman, dead in a scantily furnished, dark and gloomy room, almost a pauper. Life would have gone out and no one near to hear these words whispered with the last breath: "All is over now," but for the presence of one by chance.

Kate Murphy was born in Dublin, Ireland, on November 8, 1835.—one of two daughters of Sir John Murphy, who christened his child after an unmarried sister much older than himself. A little later the sister Kate married Martin McCabe, and to them was born an only daughter, who became the wife of Joseph Fisher, of New York city. Of two daughters of Fisher one became the Countess Doramon, and the other Countess Gherardesi, the husband of the latter being a descendant of Dantes. Ugoine, the other sister of Murphy, became the wife of John Ryan, once a prominent leather merchant of Louisville. In 1853, Murphy separated from his wife, but not until his daughter had finished school. He remained in the country, his wife and two daughters coming to America, where both the girls were soon married. Kate becoming the wife of a wealthy citizen of New Orleans in July, 1854. Anderson died in August, 1857, possessed of quite an estate, leaving a young widow and little daughter. The child was burned to death while the mother was at church, about two months after the husband and father died. Remaining in New Orleans until after the war, she came to Louisville, and found a home with her uncle, John Ryan. At his death in 1882 she was left alone, and a little later purchased a home on Walnut street, near First, where she lived until her death. During the past few years she has been addicted to drinking to excess, but when on a spree always cloistered herself in her room. The habit so fastened itself upon her that her property went from her, and then followed a mortgage on the home, which, only a few days ago, was foreclosed, and notice to vacate the premises given. Although only fifty-two years old, she had the appearance of one much older. She was an excellent linguist, speaking fluently English, French, German and Irish.

Blissing the Bells. The new German Catholic church on Pierce street was well filled yesterday morning, the occasion being the baptizing of the bells by Bishop Cosgrove of Davenport, assisted by Father Flaney, of Davenport, Father Adolph, Father McMenomy and Father Henley, of this city. The ceremony was very impressive. The bells were first washed with holy water, and then crossed with holy oil and consecrated by name. Incense was burned under each, and finally one tap was struck upon each of them. At the close of the exercises the bishop made a few remarks upon the age and uses of the church bell, and thanked the congregation for their generous contributions that had resulted in the erection of a beautiful church. At the close of his remarks he dismissed the audience with the benediction, and the reverend gentlemen were driven away in their carriages. The bishop left last evening for his home in Davenport.

An Unfulfilled Mission. New York Mercury: After fifty quiet and obscure years, there took place a great event in the life of Levi Swower, of Pottawattamie township. He was commissioned by the congregation of Elk Horn church to go down to Little Rock and buy a new outfit of hymn books. Levi, when the congregation by a rising vote elected him, arose in crimson embarrassment and said: "My dear brethren and sisters I'm mighty afraid that you have made a mistake. I've been livin' in the woods all my life an' never seed a town that you couldn't kiver with a good sized hoss blanket. My opinion is that it takes a putty sharp feller to buy them hymn books. It strikes me that a feller must be able to pick out seed co'n an' have a putty fair mark of tradin' hosses an' still not be the right passon to send after hymn books; but if you fellers insists, w'y, she pops, I'm mighty bold with fancy kivers, but you may rest ashored that the insides will be all right."

Levi's wife had seen good society. She had, a short time previous to her spending a few weeks at Tucker's Ford, in one of the districts subordinate to a social entertainment, had been introduced. She became very deeply impressed; and, ever afterward, when she desired to lead a conversation into a particularly refined channel, would speak of the spittoons at Tucker's Ford. Mrs. Swower was proud of her husband's hymn book appointment, but regretted deeply that the expense appropriation did not permit her to accompany him.

"Levi," she said, "you are goin' to see some fine society down thar." "I reckon so, Sue." "An' I don't want you to ask like you never seed nuthin'." "I'll try mighty hard not to."

"In society, Levi, folks estimate you a good deal by what you have seed. That's what I loved." "Levi, they've got spittoons down thar."

"Do you reckon so?" "I know in reason they have, far of I recollect right, them spittoons at Tucker's Ford come thar. They've got 'em in the churches down thar." "You don't say?"

"Yes, an' I don't want you to hang back about spittin' in 'em. No matter how putty they look, just blaze away like you never did spit nower else." "I'll do it if it takes the ha' off in spots."

When Levi returned home some of the influential members of Elk Horn church went over to see their new hymn books.

"Hoss," said Levi, "I'm sure to, I didn't fetch no books." "What no books?" they exclaimed. "Lissen to me, my wife, you all know, havin' seed good society, is sorter crazy on the subject of spittin' in 'em. I was powerful anxious about my actin' right when I got in the presence of 'em. Well, when I got down yander I went right to a church, an' while I was a-settin' thar with my mouth full of 'em, I feller showed a contrapshan at me, an' I think it was the spittoon, I'll drive and filled her mighty nigh full. An' interestin' time followed, then a sheriff drag me out an' put me in jail an' next morning the judge took every cent of money I had, so I couldn't buy no books. Mose Giffin, you air the head man amongst us, an' I'll leave it to you. Now, if you had been in my place, havin' married the woman I did, an' had been a-settin' thar an' a feller had a-showed a contrapshan at you, what would you do or say?"

Mose, after a moment's reflection, solemnly replied: "I would spit right dabb in it if I had knowed it woulder tuck all the ha' off. Brethren, we'll jest natchally have to do without hymn books a while longer."

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is not extolled as a "cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent specific in those chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

How to Test Cigars. New York Mail and Express: "I'll smoke that and tell you how I like it." "Well, I'll not put the brand on the market on the strength of that test," returned one of the largest importers of cigars in the city to a friend whom he had asked to give his opinion of a new brand of cigars he thought of introducing to the public.

"All right. Just give me a box of them and I'll be able to make a better test of their worth."

"That would be no better than the first plan you suggested."

"Perhaps," then, replied the friend, slightly offended, "you do not consider me a capable judge of tobacco?"

"Nothing of the sort. You certainly have had enough experience to tell a good cigar when you smoke it, but while that test may be sufficient for you to judge whether the cigar suits your individual taste or not, it is not thorough enough for my purpose."

"How should a cigar be judged, then, if not by smoking it?"

"There are several ways. First, by its appearance. You can tell by looking at it whether it is well made or not. Then its color has much to do with its value. But the way to test its flavor is by tasting and smelling it."

"How can you taste a cigar without smoking it? You wouldn't chew it, would you?"

"By no means. To taste a cigar you take the large end of it in your mouth and press your tongue against the ends of the leaves. Then draw your breath through it three or four times. That way you get the entire flavor. I have bought tobacco for thirty years, and I use my judgment almost solely in my purchase. During that time I have never smoked a single cigar, cigarette or pipe, and I never chewed in all my life. Smoking with an abundance of volvents, cartridge and bits, and one carried a large knife strapped about his waist. They were much depressed at the idea of returning to the commonplace scenes of a peaceable city, but submitted to the inevitable, and next day followed a hard-hearted "pescery" back to their homes.
