THE BRILLIANT MAY FETE. What at Judge Dundy's Imperial Club May Party—The Kameradschaft Banquet—Balls, Parties, Weddings—General Gossip.

The May Fete.

By some stroke of artistic genius and a great deal of hard work, the usually barn-like appearing Exposition hall was converted into a bewildering bower of beauty for the opening evening of the May fete.

Upon entering the hall the first attractive feature that greeted the eye of the visitor is the "Japanese Kawi" situated at the left of the main entrance door.

"Maud Muller at the Spring" was impersonated by Miss May Dundy in a bower of vines and flowers, and for ten cents, skated the thirst of commoners as well as judges who sauntered by.

A Scotch lass, with numerous lasses and maids, readily informed the visitor when he had reached "Scotland" as it was represented, and in case they did not its presiding officer, Mrs. N. B. Falconer did.

The art and gown department was in the gallery and contained many antique articles, such as chairs, pictures and clocks, which were long ago seen in the White House.

Immediately on the opposite side is located the American booth with the emblems of Uncle Sam proudly floating around.

As to the success of the exhibition, which although it proved to be not so great financially as had been expected, still one can only say, however, he cleared so as to reduce the debt a little.

gay appearance than on the evening previous. Up stairs in the art department, to make it more attractive, the tableaux had been changed and the different scenes were greeted with vociferous applause by the many who had paid the extra ten cents to witness them.

At all the other pretty booths there was not one that had cause to complain, for ample evidence of the success of the fair was to be seen in the faces of the many who were in the gallery and contained many antique articles, such as chairs, pictures and clocks, which were long ago seen in the White House.
