REPORT OF SECRETARY OF WAR.

We publish this morning the most important portions of the annual report of the secretary of war. The matter of the general public interest is what he says on the subject of coast defenses.

He favors a liberal policy for placing the country in a thoroughly defensive condition. He remarks that "although our position and the traditions of our national diplomacy tend to the maintenance of peace, a defensive condition will ever invite attack."

In the view of the secretary of war no time is to be lost in placing the capital of the country, the commercial metropolis on the Atlantic seaboard, and at least one port on the Pacific, in the best possible state of defense.

There will undoubtedly be a very strong pressure brought to bear on congress for a liberal appropriation to be expended in defensive works. The commercial interests of San Francisco and at other exposed points on the Pacific coast are thoroughly aroused to the necessity of securing protection, and they will spare no effort to induce congress to make provision for it.

Obviously if this law interferes with our commercial relations with neighboring countries it will have to be modified. The intent of the law, which was to put an end to the importation of foreign labor, which had been carried on for years by manufacturers and corporations to the great detriment of both home labor and that imported, was wise, but the law has been made to reach much further than this, and its application in some cases has subjected it to merited ridicule.

AN INDEFINITE BOUNDARY. The enabling act of congress fixes the eastern boundary of Nebraska in "the middle of the channel of the Missouri river." The supreme court of the state declares that the boundary line is the middle of the channel of the river as it existed at the time of the passage of the enabling act. In the case of Holbrook vs Moore, 1876, the court decided that a change in the channel of the river does not alter the boundary between Iowa and Nebraska as established by congress.

This indefinite boundary presents serious complications, in view of the changing character of the river. It is utterly impossible for officers of the law to determine where the channel was in 1800. Even if the bed of the river at that time could be found, a surveying corps would be necessary to fix the line where the authority of Nebraska ended and that of Iowa began. The absurdity of such a boundary is apparent. It establishes a confusion of authority injurious to both states.

THE MURDERER OF DOUGLASS COUNTY TAKEN.

The murderer of Douglas county and taken before a justice of the peace, but the decision of the supreme court tied the hands of the justice and the prisoner was released. The authorities of Iowa then made a demand for the prisoner. Governor Thayer refused to honor the requisition, declaring that there was a question whether the land on which the crime was committed was in Iowa or Nebraska, and he declined to pass upon it. The result of this conflict of authority was the release of the prisoner.

It is of the utmost importance that congress should take some action to determine the authority of the respective states over land of this character. Cut-off island is a standing menace to the peace of Omaha, a haven for bad characters, where they can plot and perpetrate crimes without fear of punishment. It is not necessary to consider the question of ownership of land thrown from state to state by the shifting of the channel, but good order and good government require that police jurisdiction of the respective states should extend to the center of the main channel of the river, wherever that may be. That will prevent the possibility of dispute and enable both states to deal vigorously with criminals.

DRIFT OF CANADIAN OPINION. Some recent disclosures have shown very strongly that there is a vigorous drift of opinion in a portion of Canada favorable to fusion with the United States. The declarations of the head of the provincial ministry of Quebec, M. Mercier, and of another prominent French Canadian politician, M. Thebaud, are so significant as to have attracted wide attention and discussion. M. Mercier declared that his countrymen, the French Canadians, desire separation from England. They do not wish to resume their ancient relation to France, and they understand that they are not strong enough to maintain political independence, so that the only inference to be drawn from their desire to throw off English domination is that they wish to become a part of the United States.

These declarations do not, of course, meet with universal approval among French Canadians, but it appears that those who do not approve are not influenced by any considerations of loyalty to England, but rather by incorrect views regarding what they might have to surrender in order to secure annexation. The chief fear seems to be that if they became a part of the United States their religious rights, of which they are most tenacious, would be imperilled. Of course this impression is due to ignorance of our constitution, and could be removed without the least difficulty. The discontent of the French Canadian is shown by the large volume of migration to New England, and there can be no doubt that the spirit of dissatisfaction is steadily growing. This condition of affairs cannot continue without sooner or later leading the people to make a determined effort to free themselves from a disagreeable allegiance, and whenever the time shall be ripe for making such an effort Quebec will doubtless seek annexation to the United States. This is the unmistakable drift of popular sentiment in that province, and it may be expected to make more rapid progress in the future.

Right You Are. The Washington letter from our friend Perry S. Heath is one of the most popular features of the OMAHA DAILY BEE. No Place For Slavery. The Brazilian republic has proclaimed in favor of universal suffrage. With slavery or a restricted ballot for a corner stone the edifice of the republic will stand as a weed upon a rock, and will be soon toppled to the ground. Not a Difficult Task. A good pastor of a Chicago church, who was remembered to the extent of $20,000 by Mr. Cramer's will, is to preach tomorrow on the subject "Rejoice Always." Who could'st, under the same circumstances? Frances May Lezard. St. Louis Republic. Miss Frances E. Willard, in a distribute against woman's dress, says that if Parson were petticoated there would never be home rule. Miss Willard has never married. If she ever does she will learn that petticoats and home rule are closely associated. Not Uncommon Here. Detroit Free Press. Italy is trying upon its violation of this year a process known as electrication, which is said to give the wine a fine bouquet and to clarify it. This treatment of stimulating beverages is not a novelty in this country, it having produced that standard brand of liquor known as "Jersey Lightning."

Let Bismarck Beware. St. Louis Globe-Democrat. An officer of the state department ventures the prediction that Bismarck will attempt to interfere in the affairs of Brazil on the pretext of protecting German residents. Such a thing is not impossible; but if the distinguished chancellor imagines that he can perform a feat of that kind without encountering serious opposition he is such a mistake. GREAT MEN. Sir Morell Mackenzie contemplates making a lecture tour of this country. The communist, Felix Pyat, was a great foe in his youth. Since 1845 his life has been chiefly spent in prison or in exile. Ex-President Cleveland and Mr. Henry W. Grady are to attend the dinner of the Boston merchants' association December 10. Caleb C. Willard, who for many years has been proprietor of the Elbert house in Washington, will shortly retire from the business. Charles H. Turner, who has been nominated by Tammany to fill a vacancy in con-

THE TWO DAKOTAS.

Mineral salt in large quantities has been discovered near Seward. The Seward Falls power factory is running night and day to supply the demand. The non-partisan prohibition organization of South Dakota has received $5,000 owing to the recent campaign. Robbers attempted to shoot Christian Muehler, living near Seward, while he was passing to retire to his room, but the shot missed the intended victim and lodged in the headboard of the bed. Some time ago William Wagner of White Sulphur Springs, S. D., had an instance of his rifle foot shot off. He made his first appearance since the accident on the street the other day, when he slipped and broke the ankle of the same person who had shot him. The Women's Christian temperance union of Sioux Falls, is circulating petitions pledging the signers to do no shopping on any evening of the month. The interest of the overworked salesman and woman, and is meeting with warm approval. The following fish story is from the Madison Sentinel. C. L. Alexander has on exhibition at his store a very perfect little specimen of the Hony tribe presented him by the Seward Falls power factory. It was a 100-foot arctonaw with twenty miles southwest of Howard. This well, it is said, flows with a wonderful force and throws water that is as hot as the steam of a boiler.

Nebraska Joistings. Party buildings have been erected at Grant during the past season. The Helmit. Red Cloud's prohibition paper, has been sold to the Red Cloud Democrat. There is no better location in the North Platte for a steam flouring mill than Loup City. An effort is being made to have a well bored at York in the hope of finding oil, gas, salt, or brine. Dunlap, a well known nurseryman of Dwight, was kicked by a horse and very seriously injured. The annual issue of clothing and household goods for Santee Indians is in progress at the agency. Material is on the ground for the new hotel at Gothenburg, and the building will be erected as soon as possible. The Seward Falls power factory is running night and day to supply the demand. The non-partisan prohibition organization of South Dakota has received $5,000 owing to the recent campaign. Sacrifices Made For a Son's Education in Vienna. A case of female heroism of quite recent date, which somewhat reminds me of a much older case, in which Mrs. Seward was the heroine, has come to the knowledge of the Vienna correspondent of the London Standard. In the Quartier Latin of Vienna, the quarter around Wiener Algemeines Krankenhaus, there lived, he says, "an aged widow and her only son, a medical student." The widow was poor, and the mother was obliged to sew almost day and night, and the son gave lessons, which occupied the time necessary for his studies in order to enter university life. On the continent, poor students are as frequently to be found as in Scotland, and in Vienna they form the majority. A good number of mere boys may be seen running about from one end of the city to the other, giving lessons while they are themselves pupils of the gymnasium (the central grammar school), and of the university students at least two-thirds are defraying the expenses of their studies out of their own earnings. This works admirably well as long as the minor examinations have to be passed, but when the students have the doctor-examination and the state-examen before them, assistance becomes necessary, as studying hard and cramming others have proved that the student who is poor will do as well as the rich. In such cases the poor mother or the sister, perhaps a seamstress or a dressmaker, or may be the bride-elect, who is also dependent on needlework, will for months strain her eyes and work her fingers to the bone to allow the candidate, who is the pride of the family, and may in days to come be its support, to devote himself entirely to his books to prepare for his examination. The son of one poor widow was such a candidate, and while he was gently applying himself to his studies, the final examination being very near, the mother deprived herself even of the pleasure of seeing him. One evening she was sitting at her needle, and the son of one poor widow was such a candidate, and while he was gently applying himself to his studies, the final examination being very near, the mother deprived herself even of the pleasure of seeing him.
