

SOCIAL DOINGS IN ROSY JUNE.

What Fashionable Folks Are Thinking and Talking About.

THE MONTH OF LOVE AND FLOWERS.

Marriages Which Brought Out the Leaders of the Beau Monde—A Picnic at Ruser's Park—Movements and Whereabouts.

LOST IN THE CLOVER.

A maiden was sighing all the day long, Like the waves on a restless sea, And she sang a sad and sorrowful song— My love, he is miles to me.

Yes, it is the month of roses, And the month of weddings, too, for some how they go together, not only in poetry, but in real life.

How June would be missed from the calendar if it should be dropped out, and what a great deal of the beautiful in life would be lost if there were no roses.

Life is not all made up of money-getting and the property owners' association and the political arena and the struggle for existence.

The roses are in bloom, and in this intense, bartering, busy age as when the world was younger and more easy-going and whether it be in roses, in the fields, or in the home, for roses are in a bridal bouquet, it is the roses that make up, if perhaps even more so, womanhood, after.

A verse of poetry, a pretty picture, a dainty flower, a strain of music appeals even more perhaps today to a child, to the busy man or the mature woman than it ever did before.

Gently, but irresistibly, in summer the reminders that business is not the only thing in this world. By this means he is induced to pause in his work and then, after reflection, he is delighted with the glorious vista which appears before him.

Then it is that the colors appear on the wing, enlivening and beautifying the surroundings where butterflies are found. Then it is that the songsters, amidst their chirping and joyful notes, fill the air with natural music, and irresistibly make one long to spend an hour or more beneath the shade of some spreading oak to listen to their constant strains.

Then it is that admiration, even by the most inattentive, is openly expressed at the generous and beautiful display of the rich combination of color seen in the flower-bearing plants.

How delightful upon a hot and sultry day is the delicate aroma of strawberries, berries which are tinted with a color that is pre-eminently their own, like that of sweet sixteen, blushing at the first touch of the sun and unequalled in their power of quenching summer thirst.

Summer, even with this queen of fruits alone, would be valuable as a source of happiness for its members, and something can compare with strawberries. "Doubtless," said Dr. Botcher, quoted by J. Walton, "had I have the prettiest strawberry (strawberry), but doubtless, also, God never did."

Had it not been for two very pretty weddings, with their accompaniments of batchelor dinners and bridesmaids' luncheons and the races, the past week would have been voted decidedly dull. But thanks to the weddings, society was in taste, color and merriment to talk about and the fairer friends of the brides have had no end of excitement in arranging dainty things for a proper celebration of Cupid's victory.

The wedding of Miss Beattie Yates and Miss Laura Hoagland, which was celebrated at the home of the bride's father, occupied the center while candelabra and pink shades gave a touch of pink to the place. The sideboard was banked with ferns, and the dining room was a gem in its floral arrangement, a small table being placed in the center, and the table was banked with pink and white roses, the whole effect being as pretty as could be desired.

Promptly at 6 o'clock the wedding march from "Lohengrin" played by the orchestra, announced the approach of the bridal party. Rev. William Justin Harsha, the officiating clergyman, had previously taken his position in the pulpit, and the bride and groom were introduced by the pastor.

The professional was led by Mr. W. J. Latta of Chicago, the groom's best man, Mr. Charles Wilson, Mr. Robert Patrick and Mr. Charles How, who entered from the hallway carrying broad silk ribbons which they suspended from the ceiling of the room.

Then came eight bridesmaids, all intimate friends of the bride, in the following order: Miss Beattie Yates and Miss Laura Hoagland, Miss Yost and Miss Hoagland, Miss Brown and Miss Balcombe, Miss Yates and Miss Laura Hoagland. The fair attendants formed a line on the aisle four on either side, and through this group of pretty girls the bride, leaning on the arm of her best man, Mr. Charles Wilson, and the groom, Mr. Charles How, entered the room.

The bride wore a gown of pink tulle and white chiffon, and carried a bouquet of white roses, the groom presenting the bride with a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss McKenna looked particularly pretty in a gown of pink tulle and white chiffon, and carried a bouquet of white roses, the groom presenting the bride with a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Yost wore a toilette of green and white striped gauze and carried a bunch of white roses.

Miss Hoagland appeared in a gown of lilac and white chiffon, and carried pink roses.

Miss Brown wore a gown of lilac and white chiffon, and carried pink roses.

Miss Balcombe wore a gown of lilac and white chiffon, and carried pink roses.

Miss Yates wore a gown of lilac and white chiffon, and carried pink roses.

Miss Laura Hoagland wore a pink mousseline de soie over pink silk and carried pink roses.

Mrs. Horace Ludington wore a handkerchief of gray silk with broad lace trimmings the gown being relieved by lace cap and collar, extra.

Mrs. Charles Porter, wife of the hero of the Rosebud, Captain Charles Porter of the Eighth infantry with station at Fort Niobrara, and a remarkably handsome woman, fascinating to a degree, and the rapidly moving circle of society favorites. They even batted for the next favored sister, but the unusual beauty of the bride, which did not take kindly to the election, and for that reason the event is only referred to in a general way. In addition to Miss Ludington there were present: Miss Yates, Miss Beattie Yates, Miss Hoagland, Miss Laura Hoagland, Miss Mabel Balcombe, Miss Brown.

A Farewell Reception. Monday evening a very large crowd of people left the Webster street station for Ruser's park, a special train having been provided for the excursionists, to return when tired nature cried for rest. The reason for this assemblage was a farewell reception to Miss Beattie Yates and Mrs. Seligson previous to their departure for Europe.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Country Fair" will close the most successful summer season that was ever played at Boyd's opera house this evening.

Notwithstanding the excessive heat of the day, the audience was unusually large, and has fully demonstrated the drawing powers of the great comedy. The indications are that the audience will be very large for this evening's performance.

At the Boyd opera house on Saturday and Sunday next, commencing with a matinee the Steen Zanic Mott company will give three of their mystifying entertainments, consisting of mental reading and exposure of all spiritual humbug by the mysterious Steen, new and startling illusions by the great Zanic, and a grandly introduced, the most complete psychological mystery, hypnotism, also Melie, Savara and Duncan France with their latest Parisian sensation, historical reproduction, with mechanical and apparently supernatural effects. The Steens have created a sensation in all the leading cities of the country by their mental reading and exposure of all spiritual humbug to the same here. They make an open challenge to all mediums.

HALLOW PROPRIETARY CO.

The little hamlet of Almira, lying six miles south of Dayton, Ia., boasts of a grand mother aged thirty, undoubtedly the youngest in the country. This lady is Mrs. Lucinda Dickinson, the mother of Mrs. Fred Moberly, who is the mother of a fine boy three months old. Mrs. Dickinson was married to her first husband, James Lilly, in 1874, at the age of sixteen, and the following year her daughter was born. Mrs. Moberly was married in her fifteenth year, and in January bestrawed on her youthful mother the proud duty of grandmother. Mrs. Dickinson, who has been a widow for the second time nearly three years, is about to be married again.
