HAYDENS' BOYCOTT SALE.

THERE is good reason why this sale should excite unusual attention. Julius Meyer says his boycott methods are so complete and backed by such unlimited funds that no firm could possibly exist longer than 90 days under the ban. It is really surprising how well his plans are laid, many of which he told in confidence and not for publication. Although the gist of them came to us in confidence we may be obliged to attend to them later on. We feel certain that even his most enthusiastic admirers will be surprised at his wonderful ingenuity. In these intensely practical times the public is not concerned in any one's success or failure any more than it may seem its interest. If the public had any interest in such matters it could easily be seen how utterly hopeless it would be to continue business under such crushing opposition. Julius says that no legitimate house can meet Haydens' prices and he is determined to make an example of Hayden Bros. and their way of doing business.

Any one who knows how stubborn and vindictive Julius is, when he decides to smite opposition, will not be surprised at our determination to close out at once regardless of cost.
