A call was made yesterday afternoon from the Northwestern yards for the police patrol wagon. When the officers arrived they found that a negro tramp, who had attempted to kill another tramp, a white man, by shooting him.

The quarrel had arisen between the tramps over the possession of a 14-year-old white boy, who had reached the city in company with the negro. While they were lying in a car in the upper yards the white man came along and joined them. The negro went outside and the white man talked to the boy. The boy told him he had been traveling with the negro from Laramie, Wyo., and that he was on his way to his home in Pennsylvania.

The white man told the boy that he also was enroute to his home in a town near where the boy lived in the Keystone state, and advised him to shake the negro's name and go along with him. The boy agreed to do so, and when the negro came back and ordered the white man to get out of the car, the white man walked a little distance away and sat down on the wagon car and was then taken to the city jail and locked up on a charge of shooting with intent to kill.
