REFUSES TO GIVE UP HIS KING
Italian Will Not Forewear Allegiance to Italy to Become American Citizen.

Antonio Scapio, an Italian, entered the office of the clerk of the district court Monday morning and asked for an application for naturalization papers. As the questions were being asked him he grew more and more animated, evidently pleased with the prospect of being a full-fledged American citizen, but when Deputy Clerk Steele asked him if he would "forewear all allegiance to the king of Italy and take his oath of fealty to the president of the United States," he hesitated.
"Must I renounce all my home country?"
he asked.
"Certainly," said the clerk.
"Will I do it? No, I won't be a nomerican citizen if I must give up a my king. No, no, no."
And he left without another question.
