

CRIMES BY WOMEN INCREASE

Open Season for Recrudescent Lovers in Germany Extended.

PRESS DEPLORES TENDENCY

Crowd in Court Room Cheers Acquittal of Woman Who Had Shot Her Lover.

BERLIN, May 29.—Berlin appears to have imported the rage which the French have called "crimes of passion," and to have extended their range far beyond the French example. A series of recent murders and attempted murders of men by women have been so lightly punished that the entire Berlin press is criticizing criminal authorities and juries severely.

A conspicuous case of some months ago aroused the press to protest. A young woman, informed by her lover that he did not care for her any more, invited him to a farewell walk in the Tiergarten and shot him in the back of the head, killing him instantly. She was brought to trial, not on a charge of murder, but of manslaughter, and the public prosecutor admitted the existence of the mitigating circumstances which, under a paragraph of the penal code, are present "when the defendant at the time of the commission of the action was in such a condition that he did not realize what he was doing, or suffering under a pathological disturbance of the senses through which his power of decision was made impossible."

This condition, the press admitted, was present, due to the young woman's anger at being deserted. The sentence was for a year and a half in the penitentiary.

Woman Hosts of Crime. The most striking of the whole series of "crimes of passion" was the most recent. The woman in the case lived in an aristocratic quarter of Greater Berlin in apartments paid for by an admirer. The man began to show a coolness toward her, and finally informed her that he intended to sever relations with her. Thereupon she invited him to a restaurant for a farewell supper.

In this case, too, the woman was charged with attempted manslaughter, which involves a much lighter penalty than attempted murder. It was proved on her trial that she had told her servant girl that she intended to shoot the man and that no woman is punished any more in Berlin for killing a recreant lover. She had also written in a similar vein to relatives and friends and after the shooting she boasted to her servant that she had sent four bullets into her victim.

The jury acquitted her and the spectators in the court room applauded so long and so loudly that the judge ordered the room cleared and threatened fines for contempt of court.

The Kraus Zeitungs, fairly representing the views of the entire press, comments: "It is utterly past understanding how such a person could win such sympathy that her acquittal should be greeted with frenetic applause. * * * It is perfectly plain that such verdicts, which we have seen repeatedly in the recent past, signify a danger to the security of the empire."

In administering the oath to a jury which began work this week a Berlin judge referred to the recent crimes by women and warned the jurors against permitting sympathy to influence their judgment.

Auto Sales Company is Exclusive Lozier Automobile Agency

A new concern to be known as the Auto Sales Company, under the management of Eric Nelson and located at 2519 Farnam street, is to be the exclusive agency in Omaha and Nebraska, and western Iowa for the Lozier automobile.

John M. Robbins, who has been in Omaha for the last ten days determined upon the change of the agency and an extension of the efforts of the manufacturers to have an establishment in Omaha all their own. A service station will be in connection for Lozier cars, and this department will be presided over by Mr. Timms, who has specialized upon this particular make of machines for a number of years.

H. W. Pope is to have charge of the sales department and the new headquarters will be opened Monday morning. After looking over the state Mr. Robbins is quite enthused over the outlook for his brand of cars.

MANY OMAHA AUTO OWNERS ARE PLANNING LONG TRIPS

Judging from the numerous inquiries received at the local branch of the Ford Motor company, a great many long-distance tours will be indulged in by Omaha owners of the popular car.

Several 1,000 and 3,000-mile trips have already been planned and some which will cover well up to 10,000 miles. The hundreds of local owners of the Ford cars are discovering that it is almost as economical to go touring as to stay at home.

A notable trip was recently completed by a Ford enthusiast of El Paso, Tex., who covered the 1,500 miles between that city and Omaha, successfully overcoming all sorts of road conditions, fording rivers, crossing mountain ranges and using less than sixty gallons of gasoline for the whole trip.

C. J. W. Smith of 3235 Franklin street, this city, who drove a model '13 last summer to Los Angeles, returned by way of Salt Lake City and covering in all a little over 10,000 miles, found that it had cost him, including fuel, oil, tires and repairs, less than 2 cents a mile. This, by the way, is not an unusual experience for Ford tourists.

SEX HYGIENE BARRER FROM LONDON SCHOOLS

LONDON, May 29.—The education committee of the London County Council has decided that under no circumstances should sex hygiene be introduced into class teaching in the elementary schools.

This decision was rescinded after a long investigation and the examination of a large number of teachers. Nevertheless, the report agrees that some such instruction might be given to children over fourteen in the higher schools and evening institutes, and it is suggested that pamphlets dealing with the subject should be given to girls leaving the elementary schools.

Leading Characters in 'Too Many Husbands'

Miss Marguerite Yocum Stephen Moore

On next Thursday evening, June 4, 1914, the Patricia club will present the comedy, "Too Many Husbands" at the Swedish auditorium. The proceeds of the play will be devoted to the establishment and maintenance of club rooms for the young men. A matinee for the children will be given this afternoon at reduced prices. Because of these young people, who have enjoyed previous success in the theatrical line, the public are much interested in the coming performance, as the company is composed of some very clever young people. The play is an excellent vehicle for amateurs. The plot is new and intricate, but exceedingly

ONE CAMPUS FOR UNIVERSITY AND IT BIG ENOUGH

(Continued from Page One.) 200 acres. These are compared with other institutions as follows: Michigan Agricultural College—118 Acres; Farm—1,918; Purdue University—50; Farm—400; Kansas Agricultural College—183; Farm—500; Iowa State College of Agriculture—127; Farm—1,369; University of Minnesota—108; Farm—516; Ohio State University—125; Farm—582; University of Wisconsin—621; Farm—921; University of Illinois—275; Farm—1,673. At Wisconsin all the buildings are located on the campus, and a portion of its area is also used for experimental agricultural work and for paddocks. At Illinois it is proposed to reorganize the campus and farm to increase the area to 1,500 acres. These figures show how totally inadequate is the area of land at present allotted to the university work in Nebraska.

Text of the Report. After recapitulating the arguments for and against removal from downtown and consolidation on the state farm of the university's activities the commission's report goes on: "The aim of the commission was to secure as far as possible all the important facts bearing upon the case, rather than to accumulate a wide expression of opinion. The hearing at the Lincoln hotel was only one, and by no means the most important source of information concerning the situation.

"The commission tried to discover the exact situation as determined by legislative action and the facts revealed by a study of the campus, the buildings and the actual needs of the university as set out both in official reports and as developed by a study of the situation when compared with the conditions existing in other American universities.

"In this report an effort has been made to set out without prejudice in as clear a manner as possible, the facts as the commission sees them and the arguments both for and against removal as presented in the several sources of information, together with the conclusions and recommendations of the commission.

Determining Factors. "After careful scrutiny of the arguments and an attempt to give them due weight, the commission finds that these fall into three classes:

"First—Those which represent the inevitable inconveniences of any readjustment.

"Second—Those which concern the interests of a small number of property owners.

"Third—Those which have to do with a policy which should extend over decades and centuries.

"The commission has no hesitation in ignoring the arguments which fall under the first and second heads. Only the third group deserve consideration. In the judgment of the commission the determining factors are the following:

"One—All experience proves that institutions which have been originally located in the heart of cities have been compelled to remove to suburban districts where the necessary amount of land and the right conditions can be secured. The Johns-Hopkins university organized as a graduate institution, only began its work in the heart of Baltimore. A few years experience developed the desirability of an undergraduate department. The city quarters soon proved inadequate and new plans are made for removal to a large campus several miles from the center of the city, in a location where the university may develop in response to the needs of modern education.

"The University of Michigan, located in the center of a small city, has been forced to buy its way to the boundary in order to secure the land needed for university growth.

"Columbia university has at enormous expense exchanged its earlier location for more ample quarters. The story is the same everywhere. The Alumni of the University of Georgia a few years ago presented their alma mater with an estate of 1,000 acres immediately adjacent to the original campus. If experience is to be any guide for the future then an ample provision for real estate is imperative for the university of the future. The ultimate duplication of equipment. "Two—The duplication of equipment and instruction is a policy which leads not only to economic waste, but what is more important, to lack of highest efficiency in teaching and investigation. The whole trend of university organization is toward strong unified departments which give instruction through different units or organization. For example, it would be most unfortunate to have two departments of home economics. The only way to insure the best work in home economics is to have a single department.

"It must not be forgotten that one of the issues is whether the present city site should be retained and enlarged and the Agricultural college continued at the present location, on the farm and such work as now given at the university to agricultural students be transferred to the agricultural college, or whether the future university development upon the present site of the College of Agriculture. In other words, shall two institutions be built up under one management, one in the city and the other on the college farm, or shall they be consolidated on the present site of the College of Agriculture? If, therefore, two separate institutions shall be maintained the duplication of departments becomes inevitable. This means inefficiency in both and a high cost. Two departments of English will not work such division of forces with larger and costly duplication of libraries tend to develop efficiency. It should not be forgotten that the time will come when there will be a limit to the funds available for the university. This will come before there is a limit in the demands made upon the university by the needs of the students. Every unnecessary duplication, therefore, means not only a high cost of maintenance and operation, but a most unfortunate competition between departments for funds.

Nebraska's Opportunity Open. "Even at the present state of development, while institutions are rapidly growing, there are states where this question has become very acute, due to competition between departments. In Nebraska, where the opportunity is open it would seem the counsel of wisdom to stop such tendencies once and for all, and present to the state a single unified university where research, experiment, teaching and demonstration in all type of education should be maintained economically and in keeping with the dignity of the state.

holy committed to coeducation. The generally accepted theory is that these institutions are to be operated in the interest of the state and furnish educational opportunities for all the people. The separation of any class of students into separate institutions, because they are studying agriculture, engineering or any other phase of education, is not regarded as wise public policy. The state university should be a source of unity rather than division. In working out the problems of society it will be the battling ground of democracy. Here more than elsewhere as reference to the sources, religious, social, political and occupational from which the students come will show there is to be found the most typical and representative American constituency. Under these conditions it would be most unfortunate for any state with its revenues derived from taxation to give the slightest countenance to stratification in education. The free mingling of all classes of students in the same class rooms, upon the same campuses, in the same athletic sports and in the same social life will profoundly influence the ideals of these students during their life. In the student companionships, as every college bred man or woman knows, the acquaintances are most thorough going. No sham or pretense passes unnoticed or without rebuke. The student of agriculture, or engineering, or education in preparation for teaching, or science or of law, come to know each other intimately and to estimate each other upon a basis of merit or the lack of it. This mutual acquaintance and sympathy furnishes a splendid foundation for the unprejudiced consideration of the vexatious, but not insoluble, problems of American democracy.

Importance to Students. "The importance of the resulting interchange of ideas where students in all departments are associated on one campus can not be easily over stated. In recent years the professional schools of law and medicine have felt the desirability of a closer association with the universities for the inspiring effect upon both faculty and students. The state university is coming to be recognized as the highest expression of the idealism of the citizens. In this atmosphere it will as well if the future citizen may live during the period of his college education. No better education of genuine democracy can be provided than by the free intermingling of the youth of the state on a common campus.

Five—It is perhaps worth while to add that the history of universities shows a rapid development of a desirable and respectable population in the immediate neighborhood. There is no thought that the farm campus will long be in the open country. At Ohio state university, when located, there was a distance of more than two miles to the city. At present more than 10,000 people live north of the campus and the city is closely built on three sides. This fact has influenced real estate.

Stockholm, May 29.—Swedish athletes will go to Budapest next month to accept the challenge of the Hungarians for a track and field meet, including all the events of the Olympic program. The date set is June 27-28. The original challenge for the meet at this time came from the German Athletic Federation, but the Germans have lately advised the Swedish authorities that they will not be in form for international competition before next year. There was keen disappointment here over this news, as the athletic progress of Germany has been watched with great interest, and a German-Swedish meet doubtless would have proved an exciting affair. Sweden looked about for another opponent, so that all of the preliminary work might not be wasted, and Hungary has now consented to take Germany's place.
