House Committee Sentiment Is Unfriendly to Policy

Do Not Favor Annexation of the California & Oregon Railroad Grant Lands to National Forests in Case of Forfeiture to the Government

Forfeiture of the Oregon & California railroad lands in Oregon to the United States would not be followed by their annexation to the forest reserves, if the sentiment of the House committee on public lands is a sure guide of the future policy of the government. That committee, during the last session of congress, unmistakably favored opening the lands to commercial and industrial uses. It is said on good authority that had there been any possibility of the administration's annexing the lands to the forest reserves, the public lands committee would have presented a resolution, declaring that no disposition of the lands should be made without sanction of congress.

But the president has no power to create additions to the forest reserves in Oregon. The committee had this fact investigated by B. D. Townsend, assistant to the Attorney General in the coming suits against the railroads and individuals who purchased 1000 acres or more from the railroad in violation of the terms of the land grants.

Mr. Townsend was often heard to say that he was confident no attempt would be made to include the lands in forest reserves; that such disposition of the lands would be contrary to the purpose of the suits and the congressional grants and the interests of the state.

This matter is of high importance to Western Oregon, since the government will seek, in the suits about to be brought by Mr. Townsend, the alternative reliefs of forfeiture of the lands to the government or of specific performance of the original terms of the grant, which have been ignored by the railroad for 40 years. The suits will be instituted in the United States circuit court for the District of Oregon. Mr. Townsend prepared the bills of complaint before leaving Washington and is expected to file them in Portland as soon as they can be printed.

Of the 2,999,000 acres possessed by the railroad and the 400,000 acres held by the big purchasers, fully 1,000,000 acres in and south of Lane county can be used for farming, and can support an additional population of 50,000. More than one-fourth of the 2,400,000 acres is in Douglas county, and three-fourths of it is in Lane, Douglas, Josephine, Jackson and Klamath.

Some parts of the land grant area would probably be put into forest reserves, in case of forfeiture. Such would certainly be the disposition of the lands now included within the boundaries of forest reserves. Small parcels of land might also be added to forest reserves to fill out certain areas and the same disposition might be made of remote lands that are useful only for timber and that would be held long periods of time by speculators to realize their value.

But probably not more than 200,000 acres would be disposed of that way, such at least being the temper of the house committee on public lands, which threshed out the land grant matter many weeks last winter and spring.

Involved with the railroad will be some fifty companies and persons who bought lands from the railroad in quantities of 1000 acres or more—this in violation of the 160-acre limit for purchases, and of the $2.50 per acre price limit and of the "actual settler" clause. These holders possess some 400,000 acres, the chief ones being as follows:

Fred. A. Krebs, in Coos, 4000 acres.
 Weyerhaeuser Lumber Company, in Klamath, 15,000 acres.
 Charles A. Smith, in Coos and Douglas, 20,000 acres.
 W. I. Vawter, in Jackson, 2000 acres.
 William M. Ladd, in Douglas, 1,250 acres.

All these holders of land will be made defendants in the governments equity suits, one important reason being that they all violated the terms of the land grants the same as did the Oregon & California railroad company.

Animal Life.

The whale leads all animals in point of longevity, his age being placed conservatively at 800 to 1,000 years. The tortoise comes next, with an age limit extending from 100 to 200 years. The elephant, the camel, the eagle and the crocodile are each credited with 100 years and upward. The carp is an elusive creature, its age having been figured at from seventy-five to 150 years. Tigers, leopards, jaguars and hyenas live some twenty-five years in confinement and probably much longer in the wilderness. Swans, parrots and ravens live 200 years, pelicans forty to fifty years, hawks thirty to forty, geese eighty years, monkeys and baboons sixteen to eighteen, squirrels and rabbits seven years, queen bees four years, working bees six months and drones four months.—Minneapolis Journal.

THE JUDGE AND THE VIRAGO

An Ancient Joke of Which There Are Many Modern Versions.

The following tale was translated from a very old Chinese book for the Laker's Weekly.

A certain magistrate upon opening his court observed one of his clerks whose face was covered with wrinkles and asked him what was the matter. Replied the clerk: "Yesterday evening I was reclining and enjoying the fresh air under my grape arbor, which was suddenly upset by a gust of wind and fell on me and caused these injuries."

But the judge was skeptical and said: "That is too thin. It is easy to see that the marks on your face are from scratches from walls. It must be that you have had a row with your wife, and got a clawing from her. Is this not so?"

The clerk crimsoned all over and replied: "Your honor has truly guessed it."

Then said the judge: "Why is your wife so fierce as that? Wait till I summon her and give her a beating for your revenge."

While he was yet speaking the judge's own wife suddenly came out from her house and fiercely said: "Who is he you are going to beat?"

The magistrate hastily announced the clerk and the judge's wife to come-stay's adjourned. Disposed instantly, it seems as though the grape arbor is also about to collapse.

THE QUEST OF BEAUTY.

"Making Up" Is a Very Ancient Fashion Art.

"Making up," as applied to the appearance, is by no means as modern an art as many people imagine.

In the days of Roman supremacy the women tinted their eyebrows with black in emulation of "ox eyes." They painted their faces, spritzed themselves with perfume and wore false hair or tinted their eye locks in accordance with the prevailing fashion.

The Greek ladies of the same period employed maids who rubbed out their mistress' wrinkles, "decorated" her face with red and white paint and darkened her eyebrows. It was also the fashion to coat the face with white of egg and goose grease to protect it from the sun and wind. It is even said that they had a recipe for turning blue eyes to black.

These fashions all had their origin in Italy, where in later years the notorious Lucretia Borgia is said to have dyed her hair different colors, according to her fancy of the moment.

In England in the eighteenth century many women, among them Lady Coventry, died from the effects of rouge. So in all ages "beauty at all costs" was the motto of "smart" ladies.—Pearson's Weekly.

Quite the Reverse.

Osmond—Well, you've never seen me run after people who have money.

Desmond—No, but I've seen people run after you because you didn't have money.
