SIMS SAYS ARMIES IN WEST PREPARED FOR A LONG STAY

Belief Is That Little Changing Will Be Done in Flanders and France This Winter, But That Action Will Go on in Russian Campaign

(Note: The following is the first of a series of stories by William Philip Simms, manager of the Paris Bureau of the United Press. The series embodies material gathered by Simms on his recent tour of the battlefields with the group of foreign attaches especially invited by the French Government. Simms was the only American newspaperman, who was accredited for the trip.)

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, Nov. 28.—(By mail to New York)—I have the distinct impression that the French, English and German armies will remain pretty much where they are until well into next spring, and that but for occasional and sometimes possibly few bloody encounters in this, the Western theater of war, most of the action will come in the region of the Russian frontier, until that time.

From what I have seen of the Allies' preparation back of the actual fighting line, for the Germans to make much headway south seems to be impossible. Also, by reading between the lines, I gather that the Allies are quite satisfied with the situation as it is.

Officers are firmly convinced that Germany is daily growing weaker while their own side is growing very much stronger every day. They say they can afford to play a waiting game and let Germany do the costly attacking.

Germany, they insist, yearns to strike a telling blow at the earliest possible moment, because she thinks the very moment lost leaves her that much weaker in men, money, munitions and food.

MOVING PICTURES

The seventeenth episode of "The Perils of Pauline," is the main picture event of the five-reel program at the Star theater tonight. Patrons are becoming very much interested as to the outcome of this serial. In this episode we see Pauline and Harry in some new thrills, slowly but surely, they are bringing the villainous Owen to his doom.

There the three Vitagraph pictures on tonight's bill, among them is a two part comedy drama entitled "Bread Cast Upon the Waters," featuring Miss Lillian Walker. Critics compliment this feature very highly. The closing number of the program

Another thing that pleases the strategists here is the extended battle line, hundreds of miles long. They claim this places the Germans at a capital disadvantage.

Desirous of forcing a decisive action the Kaiser's forces apparently can not do so because stretched out over such extended territory the necessary concentration is out of the question. At the same time to shorten the battle line would expose the flanks to the Allies offensive.

Here every officer I meet is all smiles. At the beginning of the war it must be confessed, there was more or less uneasiness among the military. This is all changed now and on all sides one meets with the utmost confidence in the final outcome of the war.

The impression here seems to be that the war will be rather a long one. Everywhere I see preparations which lend emphasis to this belief.

Behind the lines the French organizations has been perfecting itself until at the moment it is running with the precision of a well-oiled piece of machinery. The system of revictualing the army and keeping it supplied with ammunition, the arrangement for evacuating the wounded and generally the whole administration of the army is now organized as though the war is a permanent institution destined to last for all time.

In short, the Allies are perfectly prepared to play a waiting game if appearances count for anything. I feel sure that they are of the opinion that they can wear Germany down and sooner or later, at a moment they judge opportune, strike the decisive blow. Until that time I believe they will content themselves with blocking Germany's blows, knowing that each blow uses up that much power and makes her by just that much easier to master when the final hour arrives.

Germany, I am convinced, is playing into the Allies hands whether she wills it or not. Like a person caught in a quickmire, the more she struggles the deeper she sinks into the sands and the quicker.

Germany may try to decide things this winter, but she can scarcely succeed. Perhaps along the Russian frontier somewhere during the cold weather, a telling action may be fought, but otherwise there promises to be a lull in the fighting not a complete cessation—until the sap rises. Then they may commence the beginning of the end.

M'TWEEDY FREE OF THE CHARGE

EVIDENCE INTRODUCED TENDED TO SHOW THAT TRADE WAS NOT TO LIKING, SO HE TOOK BACK HIS PROPERTY

After several witnesses had been examined, Justice of the Peace E. W. Gawn late Saturday dismissed the charge of larceny of a horse preferred against M. McTweedy by G. A. Johnstone. The evidence failed to show a theft, but indicated that the defendant had traded a horse to Johnstone for an automobile, on condition that the automobile was found to be as represented.

This, McTweedy says he did not find, so he took the horse. No arguments were made by District Attorney John Irwin or W. H. A. Renner, who represented the defendant.

Penrose and Sullivan to Be Investigated

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Calling for investigation of alleged use of vast sums of money in the United States Senatorial primaries in Pennsylvania and Illinois the annual meeting of the National Popular Government met here today. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, the president, presided. The League went on record as favoring the resolution of Senator Norris, urging a Senate investigation of the campaigns in which Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania and Roger Sullivan of Illinois figured last fall.

Enactment of the new Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and the initiative and referendum were topics discussed by prominent speakers.

New Year's night. A large crowd was present, and good order maintained, and every body enjoyed the evening.

The guests danced all night until 7 o'clock next morning. They had a good supper to replenish the body.

U. E. Reeder and family, from Lost River, Tom Grubb, from the Falls, and Gordon's young folks, from Worden, were among the visitors who enjoyed the dance.

The Avery company played the music.
