WILL RECEIVE DECORATION FOR BRAVE CONDUCT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—A graphic account of the part played by Major Samuel I. Johnson, of Honolulu, assistant commandant of the Allied forces in Vladivostok during the revolutionary fighting in that city on November 17 and 18 has been received by the Red Cross headquarters here. The Red Cross report says that Major Johnson has been recommended to the All-Russian government for decoration with the Officer's Cross of St. George for the services he rendered to the people of Vladivostok during the fighting.

As a recommendation is considered the equivalent to bestowal, this makes the sixth award received by Major Johnson during his service in Siberia with the American forces, the others being the Russian Medal of St. Anne and Japanese, Czechoslovak, Italian and Chinese decorations.

Governor M. M. Eversman, of Primorsky Province, in a letter to Major General W. S. Graves, commanding the American forces in Siberia said:

"I cannot leave unmentioned the fact that Major Johnson, having splendidly fulfilled his plan in guarding the town and the peaceful population, though exposing his own life to danger, under furious fire, succeeded four times in getting through to the passenger trains that were in the center of the fighting zone and from there brought to safety officers, their families and civilians."

Major Graves, son of General Graves, was another officer, according to the Red Cross account, who with utter fearlessness walked into the danger zone to aid women and children exposed to fire. Major Johnson has paid tribute to the part also played by the International Military Police, whom he commanded.

"I want those men to get the recognition due them," he said. "They rendered the greatest assistance, showed absolute steadiness and coolness, and ran the same risks." The Red Cross account says that the International Military Police and Allied detachments held control of Vladivostok, enforcing the policy of neutrality adopted by the allies and that, thanks to this, Vladivostok was unswept by battle except in the vicinity of the railway station.

There, however, furious combat raged. "For men who entered the area of fighting and the path of flying bullets entered at deadly peril and every man knew it," says the report.

"Among those saved by Major Johnson and his men were General Romanovsky and family. Romanovsky is chief of the Russian General's staff. He was living with his family in the railway yards in his special train and was a non-combatant. Soldiers of both sides fired upon the train. It was utter dark and a storming, snowing November morning when Major Johnson found the car and escorted the family to safety.

"Some of those he rescued that night were found in the railway station, where the most sanguinary fighting took place. They had sought refuge in cellars, or secluded little offices, and crouched in the darkness, afraid to move, afraid to whisper. In most cases, when the rescue party arrived, it took repeated calls and reassurances to locate the frightened, suspicious men and women.

"The first rescue trip was made about 10 on the night of November 17 and the last at 4:30 on the morning of November 18.

"Major Johnson's command of Russian, for he is Russian born, was a big asset in this emergency work at the railway station, as it has been throughout his service in Siberia. "General Romanovsky expressed

FRENCH BOXER'S MANAGER CASTS MYSTIC SPELL

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Apparently Jack Dempsey will have to fight two men when he meets Georges Carpentier for the World heavyweight championship, if the deductions of a London writer are correct. According to this authority Descamps, manager of Carpentier, possesses some sort of a mystic eye with which he cast a spell over Beckett in a recent battle in London with the result that the French pugilist had an easy task in knocking out the befuddled Britisher.

In the words of the discoverer of this alleged dual combination which confronted poor Beckett during the 70 odd seconds he stood before Carpentier, the strange influence made its effects felt as follows:

"There were two personalities fighting Joe Beckett from the moment he entered the ring. Carpentier was one. The other was Descamps, his manager. Descamps is a very excitable man. He is a bundle of nerves, a typically French, over flowing personality, whose individuality oozes from every pore. He does not effervesce. He exudes.

"Descamps says that when Carpentier meets Jack Dempsey, Carpentier will win in six rounds. Watch Descamps. He is the man who is aiding Carpentier with all mental force. His mentality accompanies Carpentier into the ring every fight. He is his unseen silent partner, and to him as much as to Carpentier is Beckett indebted for the blow on the jaw which finished the fight and took the championship of Europe out of his reach.

"What was Descamps doing as Beckett came into the ring? Those who were near him tell me he was watching Beckett intently. The fact is, he began to fight Beckett as soon as Beckett stepped into the ring. Beckett was constantly glancing round at Carpentier as he was getting his gloves adjusted. There you have the personality of Descamps beginning to work; impinging itself on Beckett's brain and beginning its task of confusing the English boxer's thoughts. Possibly Descamps is not quite conscious in his own power, but it is there all the same. This projection of personality is not hypnotism, but it is to be seen operating everywhere."

RUNG THE BELL

WACO, Tex., Jan. 15.—The janitor of the city hall, answering a bell which means "pile on more coal," the other night crammed the furnace with high-priced coal until the building was so hot he decided to go upstairs to investigate. He found the city prison turnkey sound asleep, sweating copiously, with his feet on the bell the janitor had been answering.

to the Red Cross representative grateful appreciation for what Major Johnson did.

"I do not know how any man could go into that hell of fire, find our train and bring us out," he said, "but this man did it."

"He even saved the cat. Getting the party out of the train Major Johnson heard the howl of the lonely, mortally frightened cat somewhere in the dark car, lit only by the lurid flashes of guns and the reflection of burning buildings.

One of the women asked to take the cat and the rescue party halted there in a shattered train, found the cat hiding in a mass of broken berths and took her to safety with the family."
