PARCELING OUT.

Real estate operations in this city have taken a correct turn. Tracts of farm and fruit land, several hundred acres in extent, are partitioned into small parcels of ten or twenty acres, and are meeting with a ready sale. This commends itself to the practical minded as useful in several ways. It places farms within the reach of men of small capital, and encourages settlement by a class of men best adapted to our present needs. Farmers, who speak from practical experience, confirm the views of political economists, in declaring that small farms—say 40 acres—are more profitable than large estates. Common observation suggests strong argument in support of this. As a rule the settler who comes out west in search of a home has limited means. He may have $1,000 at his command; he is fortunate if he has twice or thrice that sum. He cannot invest much in buying a home; or even if the land should cost him nothing, he cannot spend much in improving it. A good portion of this rich and spacious valley is held under the old donation land claims. Pioneer farmers for the last thirty or forty years have held on to their 640 acres, unable to cultivate a title of it with any thoroughness, yet unwilling to part with an acre. Our readers can run over in their minds a number of this class who are crowded every year to pay their taxes, whose live stock has run down because they cannot afford to improve the breed, whose fields lie fallow because they cannot get their work in between the seasons, and who live in squalor in a land of plenty. This might have done in ante-bellum times, when it was a long summer's journey across the plains, and when mails from the east came in once a year. But the presence of the locomotive has changed all this. This scratching the soil; and letting wild nature get away with your labors is now an anachronism. The populous north continues to throw out its surplus population, the tide is flowing in this direction and seeking to occupy all the waste places. This is in accordance with the correlation of forces. Wherever a function exists the re is a need for its exercise. The land is in abundance, the climate and natural conditions are favorable, and homeseekers are innumerable. Small farms and thorough culture are taking the place of large tracts inadequately tilled.

A WRITER who signs himself G. H. E. has been furnishing some tariff articles to the Itemizer, full of numerical statements; and now he is publishing other articles, with fresh numerical statements, to explain what has previously appeared. "Allow me," he says to the editor, "to make a few explanatory remarks, and I promise for the future to quit exclaiming your columns with my notions." What with perverse types and the confusing effect of large sums on the mind, G. H. E. has a discouraging task.

MORE ASSUMPTION.

The great error of our morning cotemporary is in mistaking assumption for fact. Yesterday we reproduced in our columns some choice excerpts from the torrent of invective and abuse he has been pouring on the devoted head of Supt. Lee. The virulence of his attack struck us as excessive, and as his loose charges were sustained with no specification, we gave proper expression to our sense of his injustice. This furnished the Statesman editor with ground for another assumption. He charges Col. Lee "supernumerary of the Indian school at Chemawa" with sneaking "behind anonymous articles in obscure sheets to throw mud at the Statesman." If there was any mud in the article we published yesterday it was scooped out of the delectable sheet that now appears as accuser. Continuing his assumption our brother quill says: "He descends to the language of the fishmonger to deny, but not to disprove the assertions made in these columns. There is no argument in abuse, and the simple denial of a fact by one so steeped in mendacity as Col. Lee is no shadow of proof that it is not true."

Satan rebuking sin is an edifying spectacle. If Supt. Lee had written or suggested the article that is so hurtful to the delicate susceptibilities of our cotem he could not have disproved the assertions made, because they are mere ribaldry and detraction. "There is no argument in abuse," says this austere censor, and in this admission he writes his own condemnation.

This writer has no acquaintance with Supt. Lee beyond saying how d'ye on the street; he was never in THE JOURNAL, office, and never exchanged a word with us on the Statesman abuse. This is all laid assumption again. Our fellow scribe imagines a thing, and then, most ignorant of what he's most assured, makes positive declaration of supposed facts. Hamlet cautioned the players against overstepping the modesty of nature; our journalistic friend would do well to heed the same counsel.

TOO BIG A CONTRACT.

Since Congressman Knute Nelson, who represents the strongest republican district in Minnesota, voted for the Mills bill, there has been some curiosity as to his latest opinions concerning tariff legislation and the tariff policy of the party. About ten days ago the prohibitionists of Minnesota asked him to permit them to nominate him for governor. He replied that he would not accept a nomination for that office from them or any other party. On the same day he made the following statement in answer to a question about his attitude with respect to the tariff and the campaign: "You may say that we are going to clean out Grover Cleveland this fall, and then we are going to clean out the high tariff crank republicans who want to revise the tariff by repealing the internal revenue upon whisky and tobacco."

That is to say, Mr. Nelson first proposes to defeat the democratic party and then to defeat his own, for the platform of "the high-tariff crank republicans who want to revise the tariff by repealing the taxes on whisky and tobacco," is the platform adopted unanimously and with considerable enthusiasm by his party in its national convention. Mr. Nelson and his friends, to whom he refers in the pronoun "we," have undertaken a very extensive contract.

We saw a wealthy merchant on Friday who wore the coat in which he was married twenty-five years ago. In reply to a question as to the reason why he appeared in that particular garment, he said it was his mascot; that whenever he entered upon a new speculation, or made a new investment, or took any important step in domestic or business life, he had always donned that coat, and that its charm of luck had never yet deserted him.—Boston Gazette

EASTERN TEACHERS.

Every New England State represented.—Salem Citizens meet them with Fruits, Flowers and Carriages.

When it was known that about sixty of the ladies and gentlemen who had attended the National Teachers' Association would pass through Salem to-day, the Board of Trade, Oregon Land Company, Prof. McElroy and many prominent citizens determined to induce them to stay over in the capital city for a few hours. By aid of the telegraphic wires this was accomplished. Shortly before 11 a. m. the California overland train of cars, in charge of Conductor Connor, drew up to the depot where many were waiting to receive them. Bouquets, baskets of flowers, tall corn, apples, pears, and berries in great profusion were distributed throughout the two Pullman cars containing the main body of the teachers. Prof. McElroy, Dr. Minthorne, John G. Wright, T. McF. Patton, Prof. M. G. Lane, with many others and a number of ladies informally but very cordially welcomed them, and handed them to seats in the carriages placed at their disposal by our citizens, who displayed commendable zeal in making the brief stay of the visitors as pleasant as possible. One Pullman car was in the charge of Rev. W. N. Ackley, of Warren, Rhode Island, a very affable gentleman who declared that the trip from California and through Oregon, had been most delightful. His part of the company consisted of Rev. T. D. Anderson, Misses A. C. Dewing, H. A. Rea, Angel, Ruth A. Haskell of Providence, R. I.; Dr. C. S. Gates, E. E. Page, of Amherst Mass.; Misses Maria Jacobs and Jennie Miller, and Mrs. J. K. Weaver, of Norristown, Penn.; Mrs. Mryy Greene, Lizzie Stevens and O. J. Smith, Boston; Misses Clara Atkinson and Florence Newton, Newport, R. I.; Misses Annie and Emma F. Collins, Warren, Mass.; Miss Henrietta Roberts, Hallowell, Mass.; Miss M. M. Gile, Miss L. E. Giddings, Summerville, Mass.; Miss E. W. Cleveland, Westminster, Conn.; Dr. Anna B. Taylor, Charleston, Mass.; Miss E. M. Brown, Woburn, Mass.; Miss T. L. Davis, Cavendish, Vermont; Miss Sarah C. Allen, West Newton, Mass. A glance at the list will show every New England state represented.

In the pullman car, Mr. A. C. Stocking, of Boston, had charge, and was accompanied by Misses H. C. Watson, C. I. Hall, S. A. Whitney, A. P. Josselyn, M. Stahr and P. E. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hill and wife, and Messrs S. C. Stone and W. C. Hardy, Boston; Mrs. A. H. Wellington and Misses S. J. Gunnison and C. M. Chase, Cambridge, Mass.; Mrs. Wheeler and Mrs. Thomas, Philadelphia; Miss E. L. Davis, Vermont; Mr. J. W. McDonald, East Stoneham, Mass.; Misses H. E. Chandler and Carrie E. Small, Plymouth Rock; Miss M. Harry, Norristown, Penn.; Mr. A. W. Bell, West Newton, Mass; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Mead and Miss Mead, Chicago. Mr. Stocking also was lavish in his praises of the Pacific coast so far as seen and said his wonder grew at the size, fertility, resources, and capabilities of Oregon the further he traveled through it. All expressed great delight with our homes, gardens, public buildings, fruits and flowers. The visitors were as intelligent and sociable a company as ever visited Salem.

In good time the cars were attached to the Eugene express. Gov. Penoyer stepped aboard and accompanied the delegation as did Supt. McElroy, Hon. T. L. Barian, and T. McF. Patton. Will any state do things more handsomely than to send off the visiting teachers with His Excellency the Governor, the State Supt. of Instruction, the State Chairman of the Republican party and a clever gentleman like Mr. Mc. Patton? Amid waving handkerchiefs the train bore them away.

Secretary of State McBride, confined to his room, is better to-day.

Board of Equalization.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the Board of Equalization for Marion county, Oregon, will meet at the county court-house in Salem on Monday, August 27, 1888, and continue in session there for one week, for the adjustment of assessments. Dated July 21, 1888. T. B. PATTON, 63-d-wed, Auditor of Marion Co., Or.

From the "Daughters of the Regiment." One of the young ladies of this and the adjoining office, sends this hurried screed:

After vexatious delay, we reached Newport on Friday, at 10 p. m., having been detained at Yaquina after the arrival of the train, nearly five mortal hours.

[This was not quite so bad as having to stay all night as at first reported to this office by a relative of one of the other persons detained.—Ed.]

We are at a hotel, and find accommodations and board good, and reasonable; the people homelike and sociable. We have a grand time walking on the beach and bathing, in company with a big crowd.

We shall stay here till next Monday. We are going to Seal Rock this week. What a pity there are no more cottages to be "drawn as prizes." Clams, oysters and crabs are abundant, the Indians bringing in many. To-morrow we shall pay a fraternal visit to the different newspaper offices.

We called several times on Mrs. Sullivan, formerly Miss Flora Niles, of South Salem. Have just seen Prof. Parvin and Miss May. We thought the boys would surely think enough of us to send us the daily JOURNAL; we are hungry for home news. Perhaps copies will come in on the mail to-night. (They go regularly.) L. W.
