GENERAL HARRISON'S speeches to visiting delegations are marvels. He always has something of interest to say and he says it well. Not only does he arouse the enthusiasm of his hearers, but all over the country the people read his speeches and enjoy them.

CATHOLICS must not be creamed. That is the substance of a recent edict issued by Pope Leo IX. He condemns cremation and recommends that all loyal adherents of the Church shall inter their dead in Mother Earth. Cremation has long been practiced among the Catholics of Italy and France, and although it has been thought that the Pope did not regard the practice with favor, he has never before given any official utterance on the subject.

THE recent action of the courts in revoking the licenses of three liquor-sellers, says the Pittsburg Herald, who were convicted of violations of the liquor law, has brought the dealers throughout the city to a realization of the fact that they are to be held rigidly to the provisions of the law. A well known attorney stated not long ago that he thought that there would be full 600 of the present licenses refused at the next sitting of the license court. The number of licenses granted by the judge was considered too large at the time they were issued, but it is explained that they purposely granted an excessive number, as they did not want to embarrass the officers in the enforcement of the law or to be arbitrary and severe. It is believed on good grounds that the next license court will be more severe, and that the total number of licenses granted will be less than 800. A great many saloon-keepers who failed to obtain licenses last June expect to get them next year, but it is thought that a great many are doomed to be again disappointed. This action of the officers should be encouraged. Every law should be strictly enforced and if found obnoxious or injurious should be altered, amended or repealed.

Governor Gray informed President Cleveland there was no use expecting that Indiana would give a democratic majority, as the state was almost certain to go republican, and assigned as reasons the attitude of the democratic party on the tariff question, and state pride which desires to see one of its honored citizens the nation's chief magistrate. Governor Gray's head is level. There is not a particle of doubt in reference to Indiana. It has been apparent almost from the first that the state would stand by her gifted son, and latter events have rendered this almost certain.

Perceptible to outsiders there has been a steady growth of public sentiment in his favor. His most remarkable series of speeches, which have arrested universal public attention, have justly inspired the people of the state with constantly increasing pride in their fellow citizen, which is evidenced by the enthusiastic delegations which are pouring in upon him from all sections of the state.

There is no mistaking the temper of these crowds. They are full of contagious enthusiasm, and each and every individual in them feels that the state would be forever disgraced did she not give a rousing majority for Ben Harrison, and indeed she would be. Dispassionate observers on both sides agree that the enthusiasm shown for Harrison is without a parallel in the history of that state, remarkable as it is for exciting campaigns.

Oh, Indiana is all right, and so is the solid North, for everywhere enthusiasm for Harrison is deepening and widening and is rapidly forming itself into a resolute flood that will bury Grover and his free trade crew so deep that they will never be heard from again.

HE EXPLAINED IT.

A Democrat in Iowa who undertook to defend the Mills bill on the President's theory that the cost of an article is increased by exactly the amount of duty collected on it, wandered from his base and demanded of the Republicans "Why do you want a duty on agricultural implements when we can buy them cheaper here than abroad." Then he proceeded to prove his statement by quoting from a recent speech made by Congressman Brewer of Michigan as follows: "Something over three years ago I attended a national agricultural exhibition of France. There were fourteen or fifteen acres of ground covered with farming implements, tools, machinery, etc. All the exhibitors had their price lists upon their exhibits and I was careful to obtain copies of them. The lowest priced horse-rake was 250 francs, or $50 of our money. The lowest priced mower was $102 and was no better than we sell for $60. The plows, harrows and cultivators were 20 per cent. above the price they were selling for in the United States." He ignorantly supposed this to be a strong argument in favor of his position, and failed to see that it destroyed the foundation he had established at the beginning of his argument. But this is the way with all, from the president down: none of them pursue their investigations far enough to understand clearly what they advocate.

"FLOOD'S estate," says the San Francisco Alta of the dying millionaire, "is valued by good judges at $15,000,000. At the height of the bonanza excitement, when shares on the leading mines brought $900 and paid $50 a month dividend, Flood's wealth was rated at $40,000,000, but then came the great shrinkage in Comstock values, which cut down the fortune of all the mining millionaires fully one-half, and Flood's losses by the Nevada bank wheat deal were fully $5,000,000. The property will probably be equally divided between the wife, son and daughter. The latter was always Flood's favorite, and at one time she possessed in her own right $5,000,000 in real estate and government bonds. She gave much of this to help her father out of his embarrassments a year ago, but still owns about $2,000,000. Young Flood is shrewd, but has no stability, and the old man never trusted him in any large deals."

The Enemy at Work.

Mrs. M. C. Lord, writing from Pasadena, says let no one be alarmed at the report that five hundred "voters" in Pasadena have petitioned for high license. The list of names was scarcely printed when a citizen offered one hundred dollars if he could ascertain who forged his name. Another leading business man stated that the name figuring as his on the petition was not placed there by him, and that he opposed license, high or low. The "oldest inhabitant" finds the names strangely unfamiliar, and—but why go on? The readers understand the tactics of the enemy; the whole thing seems to be done for outside effect; no one is deceived. There is a strong faction determined to discredit our prohibitory ordinance, but the sentiment of the people is overwhelmingly on the side of the ordinance, and the women are awake.

The contest is not merely a local one; we have the wine and liquor traffic of the whole state, not to say nation, to fight, and it boasts that it will break the backbone of this temperance town. Therefore listen to no unfavorable reports unless they come from the W. C. T. U.

Good Work in Arkansas.

Major Hilton's coming has mightily stirred Hot Springs. For five days he held meetings and many new members are being added to our number as a result of our work, and words of encouragement and God speed are heard from many who once would have said "You can do nothing." The secret of Major Hilton's success is consecration. He turns the blaze of gospel light upon the liquor business, and exposes the monster in all his hideousness. His weapon is the two-edged sword of truth, and it strikes to the heart, convincing a man, not against his will, but through his will. His special aim is to reach that sleepy, apathetic class of Christians who detest themselves with the thought that they are not their brother's keeper, and his success may be well expressed in the remark of Louis XIV. to the preacher Massillon: "We have heard many orators and been pleased with them; having heard you we are much displeased with ourselves."

The immigrant as he sets foot in New York almost under the shadow of "Liberty Enlightening the World," must run the gauntlet of the five hundred saloons and low boarding houses which cluster around Castle Garden. Every device which a wicked ingenuity can invent is brought to bear upon the unsophisticated foreigner to entice him into these dens of vice.

The San Francisco grand jury in its last report stated that there are 1,200 or 1,500 criminals in that city and county who virtually control elections. "Ninety-nine one-hundredths of the children of America kept out of school are the children of drunkards."

In the last ten years 3,000 patients have been treated at the Temperance Hospital, London.

HONESTY BRINGS HAPPINESS

WILL HARRISON be defeated? For reply spell his name backwards.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES on being asked when the training of a child should begin, replied, "A hundred years before it is born."

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, the prize fighter, now that he is recovering from his late serious illness declares that he will never drink again, and exhibits sufficient moral courage to say: "There was a time in my sickness when I was thought to be dying, but God was good to me and gave me one more chance. I've fully made up my mind what to do with the chance, and I will never again touch a glass of beer or a drop of any kind of intoxicating liquor. No man who is a friend of mine will ever ask me to drink again." If Sullivan keeps this pledge, says the Oregonian, and it is very probable he will, he will become a better man than he ever has been mentally, morally and physically, and will win the most important battle of his life. He will then be a man who will command the respect of respectable people.

The Eugene physicians report the number of new cases of typhoid fever on the decrease and the late ones more mild than the earlier ones.

The amusements of the eve greatly vary in different localities, and among different people. In some sections, parties, where all the ladies are dressed in calico or a kindred material, and their male attendants are arrayed in vests, coats and neckties of the same material, are the vogue. Frequently the young ladies send sufficient material, like their gowns, for the gentlemen's outfits, to the house of the person who gives the party. Then, on an evening a week previous to said party, all the gentlemen invited, meet and select their materials. This they have made into coats, vests and neckties, without knowing to whom they are indebted.

On Halloween, as each gent walks into the reception-room, he selects, for his partner, the young lady wearing the gown that matches his coat. Thus, according to tradition, he learns his fate in the lottery of matrimony. Another way is, for each lady to make a necktie from material like the gown she is to wear. All these neckties are put in a box, in the gentlemen's dressing-room, and each selects what, to him, is the prettiest and most neatly made. He chooses, for his partner, the young lady with gown to match.

The menu of this feast embraces nuts, apples, doughnuts and cider, and sometimes a simple domestic cake. The gentlemen of the party should, to carry out the "idea," crack all the nuts, and then act as waiters, passing the refreshments to the ladies. No servants should appear on the scene.

THE American national vice of carelessness ought to be solicitously excluded from the operation of our railroads, from motives of economy, even if no higher consideration be admitted to the accounts. The Lehigh valley disaster should be the conspicuous illustration of this common failing. Recklessness like that which made this horrible slaughter possible, is scarcely distinguishable from criminality. Such an awful event needs to be followed not only by atonement, but retribution as well. The blood of the slain cries out from the ground against the guilty ones.
