THE PILOTAGE LAW.

The Oregonian is making one of its persistent efforts to secure the repeal of the Campbell pilotage law passed by the last legislature. It calls upon the farmers of the wheat growing counties to arise en masse and elect men to the legislature next June who will demand the repeal of that law in the interest of Portland.

Without discussing the local interest of that city, which is always and properly placed foremost in the Oregonian, there is a larger interest involved in this question and that is the development of the whole state. Oregon already has an immense shipping trade, and ports of great commercial importance aside from Portland. That city is over a hundred miles inland and not even on a sea going stream at that. It is certain that the state must have a pilotage system constructed upon a broader basis than the interests of any one city. Portland has too long dominated the commercial legislation of our state for her own and the states' welfare.

If the present pilot law is honestly maintained and enforced it will result in all shipping interests being served equally well upon our coast. The science of piloting is of such importance to shipping interests that it must be left free and not interfered with in the interest of any locality. If shipmasters can know that there is a first-class pilot fleet on the lookout for them at any harbor off our coast they will feel a freedom to come here, and it will be a stimulus to trade that no law can impart.

It is quite natural Portland should wish to overcome the natural obstacles in the way of her shipping by artificial regulations in her favor and at the expense of the rest of the state. But it is far more important, and the rest of the state should be given a chance to develop its commerce and not be left to the tender mercy of the Union Pacific, or any other corporation. The Campbell pilot law will bear discussion.

Harsh, but - - - "Ho," said a well-known statesman, "I shall never believe that woman has the proper judgment and sense to cast a ballot, or interfere in politics, while she is so weak-minded as to passively suffer, year after year, from diseases peculiar to females, when every newspaper picks up, tells of the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Not to take advantage of this remedy is certainly an indication of mental weakness."

There is a wholesome kernel of truth inside the rough shell of this ungalvanized speech. The "Favorite Prescription" is invaluable in all uterine troubles, inflammations, obstructions, displacements, nervous disorders, prostration, exhaustion, or hysteria. For rundown, worn-out women, no more strengthening tonic or nerve is known.

Set Him Right.

Geo. Augusta Sala, the well known English writer, on his last Australian trip, wrote as follows to the London Daily Telegraph:

"I especially have a pleasant remembrance of the ship's doctor—a very experienced maritime medic indeed, who tended me most kindly during a horrible spell of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, provoked by the sea fog which had swooped down on us just after we left San Francisco. But the doctor's prescriptions and the increasing warmth of the tropics, and, in particular, a couple of Alcock's Porus planters clapped on—once on the chest and another between the shoulder blades—soon set me right."

SUGGESTED COMMENT.

Many of the hop growers in the valley are having a difficult task to raise money to defray the expenses of harvesting their crop. Such a state of affairs was never known heretofore. When little skin flint brokers' offices—"dubbed" banks in gilt edged and aluring letters that charm, to ruin, and wreck industrious poor people, one may look out for hard times. Such foul abortions as the last two by four falsely named banks which sprung up in the Willamette valley in the past two years, to outrage, swindle, and spread desolation among the people can always be considered an index of coming robbery and ruin to many happy homes.—Cottage Grove Leader.

Attorney General Chamberlain holds that the sale of deer meat is lawful during the open season. It appears, that under the provisions of the first section, it is unlawful to sell or offer for sale the meat of any deer at any time after the passage of the act, whilst under those of the latter, implied permission is given, during the open season to sell the carcass of such animals for food. The attorney general holds that the two statutes must be continued together, according to a fair import of their terms, with a view to effect their objects and promote justice. On these grounds he holds the sale of deer meat during the open season, but thinks the statute prohibits the killing of spotted fawns at any time of the year.—Corvallis News.

Some Women's Pet Aversions. An English magazine the other day asked women to tell what they consider their pet aversion. Here are some of the answers received: "The endless discussion of the Irish question."

"My pet question has no name or being, yet I see her plainly with my spirit's eye. There she sits, always neat and unruined, ever wearing that serene smile which makes me long to shake her, if only to see how she would look then. Always conscientious, always kind, her worst fault is that she has no fault."

"My pet aversion is the fidgety, tidy woman." "Cows, of course! If I only knew that that long and steady stare meant! But I don't, and mystery commands awe."

MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Dear Sir: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much with dizziness. For the last three years I could not sleep on my left side or back until I began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, smothering, dropsy, no wind or stomach or other disagreeable symptoms. I am able to do all my own housework without any trouble and consider myself cured.

May 13, 1893. Mrs. ELMIRA HATCH. It is now four years since I have taken any medicine. Am in better health than I have been in 40 years. I honestly believe that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure saved my life and made me a well woman. I am now 67 years of age, and am able to do a good day's work.

Teaching Children Politeness. Children are too often left totally un-instructed in those small courtesies of everyday life which go so far to make our domestic and social relations harmonious. They should be taught, almost from infancy, to be polite, to enter and leave a room properly, to respect their elders, to remove their hats when they enter a house, to seat themselves quietly instead of throwing themselves boisterously upon chairs or lounges, to close doors gently and to do many other things naturally and politely which they now do awkwardly and rudely, simply because they have never been instructed otherwise.

A little time devoted each day to this gloriously good work will surely bring an ample return in the end—will, in fact, bear good fruit from the very beginning, since a child who is being taught to be polite is at the same time learning consideration for others and so is cultivating unselfishness of character. In the same way a child who is encouraged to be orderly, to do little offices for itself, such as folding up its clothes or putting a hat or toy in its proper place, is not only mastering one of the most valuable of lessons, but is also saving the mother many weary steps in the present and heartache in after years.—Housekeeper.

Literary Men's Love of Praise. Robert Buchanan recently had a diatribe against the Author's club and the desire for money upon the part of the literary. Now he has a fresh letter on the "demoralizing effect of the pursuit of fame."

"More than one of our great writers," he says, "paid the spiritual penalty of inordinate literary success. Tennyson, we know, suffered tortures from the slightest breath of adverse criticism. George Eliot, kept by G. H. Lewes in a moral hothouse, screened from every bleak wind that blows, said to me on one occasion, with an air of beatific superiority, 'I think Mr. Dickens has done a great deal of good.' The good, the only Dickens, endured agonies of mortified vanity when a book of his failed to reach the high water mark of sale and profit. Even those who have to wait long and wearily for appreciation are seldom content to estimate the world's opinion at its exact worth. Browning, according to Leigh Hunt, hungered eagerly for the praise of even his washer-woman."
