IN POLK COUNTY.

It is currently reported that the Polk county legislative ticket—one senator and two representatives—were slated with a view to Joseph Nestor Dolph's return to the United States senate, in place of Senator Mitchell. It is said that Mr. Hawley, a brother-in-law of Mr. Dolph, at Monmouth, arranged the matter, with the assistance of Warren Thrift.

It is further stated that if Mr. Dolph's return to the senate depended upon the three votes of Polk county, if elected, he would get them. If the reports are to be believed, Mr. Veness of Independence is the only one of the ticket who is willing to make the canvass as a Mitchell man.

THE JOURNAL believes Senator Mitchell is acceptable to the people of Oregon, and that they are desirous of endorsing his record by re-electing him. If that is true, and we believe it is, do not the Republican candidates in Polk county owe it to the people to let them know whether they are for Dolph or Mitchell? The day of the cat-in-a-hat catch-em-both-ways politician are numbered. The day when men can be elected to the legislature merely to trade their vote on senator for a federal office are in the "sweet bye and bye." If they are not, they should be. The representative principle can be trampled in the dust by politicians in holding up primaries and packing conventions. But the people can no longer be rounded up at the polls to ratify schemers of purely selfish nature. So far as THE JOURNAL is concerned it will not be a party to helping deceive the people. Senator Mitchell stands with the people on the silver question; on election of senators by a popular vote of the people, and other vital issues, opposed by Mr. Dolph and his backers. If the people want Mr. Dolph to represent them, they can say so. But he should not be imposed upon them by political trickery. Let Dolph men come out and say to the people what they are, and secure the franchises of the people openly and honestly. The people will prefer to elect Democrats who are protectionists and bimetalists, and will vote for Mitchell, to Republicans who are goldites and Dolph men, and will knife John H. Mitchell if they have an opportunity.

ENGLAND IS PROSPERING.

While our country has this year had a larger treasury deficit than ever before in times of peace, and has run in debt over a hundred million, England has a larger surplus than ever known before, and is paying of her national debt.

In his budget statement to the house of commons, the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, said that the surplus for 1895-96 was £4,210,000, and he estimated the expenditures for the current year at £100,047,000. The chancellor of the exchequer said that this had been a wonderful year, and one of unexampled revenue, in spite of the fact that the expenditures had been the largest since the great war. The surplus was the largest ever known, and a larger sum was devoted to the reduction of the national debt than ever known.

The condition of the working classes, he continued, judging from the consumption of tea, tobacco and sugar, had materially improved, and it was a remarkable fact that, while the decrease in the exports and imports for the first six months amounted to £7,531,000, the increase for the second half of the year amounted to £28,228,000.

England is just beginning to get the full benefit of the policies of the Cleveland administration, while our country feels their blighting effect as never before. No revenue system for the enrichment of Great Britain and impoverishment of the United States could have been invented that would have performed its work with more deadly certainty than the Wilson-Gorman bill. The operation of that proves a perfect godsend to the English manufacturer, business man and laborer. If submitted to a vote of the people of Great Britain it would be adopted with the same unanimity with which it will be rejected in our country in November.

The free trade tariff enacted by the Cleveland administration has proven a blessing to the working people of England. It has relieved their intolerable conditions by giving them hundreds of millions of dollars of wages, and that is literally robbed and stolen from the American laborers and their families. This stolen prosperity of another nation alone makes prosperity possible under free trade. By taking the bread and butter out of the mouths of American workmen and by robbing the American manufacturer and producer of his right to a first chance at the home market, the English exchequer becomes plenary to overflowing and the old Tory party lives in clover, while the British laborer is felicitated upon having more money to buy beer, whiskey and tobacco than he ever had before.

It is gratifying to know that some one is prospering under Democratic statesmanship if it is across the water. But charity, political economy and good government should begin at home. Let England frame laws for her own prosperity and let our country do the same. The Republican party under a protective tariff system will reverse the British order of things and restore a little of the old time American prosperity to Americans and stop the present iniquitous policy of enriching European monarchies at the expense of our own people.

SHERMAN - M'KINLEY.

Stands Sponsor for the Ohio Candidate's Views.

M'KINLEY AND SILVER.

His Record in Congress and Remarks Thereon.

THE JOURNAL takes pleasure in presenting a review of Major Wm. McKinley's financial record. Senator John Sherman, in a letter to the Philadelphia Press, gives the reasons why, in the senator's opinion, McKinley should be nominated and elected president. Mr. Sherman finds it an easy task to present a long list of creditable achievements in the career of his candidate. In his unblemished record as a soldier, lawyer, congressman and governor there is much to dwell upon that is well calculated to arouse enthusiasm. Mr. Sherman has brought out the salient points of this record in a telling way without lavishing praise upon them, and has thus made a remarkably effective argument in advancing the McKinley boom.

Respecting Mr. McKinley's attitude on the money question he quotes from the former's utterances in the last gubernatorial campaign. In one of his speeches he said: "The money of America must be equal to the best money in the world. Unlike my opponent, I will not ask you to take any chances on this question; I will clearly and unequivocally say to you that my choice and influence are in favor of the best money that the ingenuity of men has devised. The people are not prepared to indulge in the speculation of free and unlimited coinage." Further on he continues: "I would as soon think of lowering the flag of our country as to contemplate with patience or without protest any attempt to degrade or corrupt the medium of exchanges among our people. The Republican party can be relied upon in the future as in the past to supply our country with the best money ever known—gold, silver and paper—good the world over." The Philadelphia Press takes much satisfaction in these utterances, and is greatly impressed, because Senator Sherman "puts his approval upon McKinley as the friend of honest money."

A BANKER'S VIEW.

We give below the estimate of Mr. A. Bush, of Salem, the well known pioneer banker, trusted friend and advisor of the present administration for the entire Pacific northwest.

BUSH ON MCKINLEY.

Recently Major McKinley gave to the public a brief statement, in which he urged that his attitude toward silver should be ascertained by examination of his record in congress. He said: "I have discussed the question of currency and coinage in congress, and my record is plain." And he made a short extract from one of his speeches, in which he had expressed a preference for "good dollars, as good in the hands of the poor man as the rich." Mr. McKinley's congressional record, to which he has referred the people in place of saying whether he now favors a gold or silver standard, is as follows: He once voted in the house for free silver coinage. In 1888, as chairman of the committee on resolutions in the republican national convention of that year, Mr. McKinley reported a platform which "condemned the policy of the democratic administration in its efforts to demonetize silver." The democratic administration had reported the protests of Presidents Hayes and Arthur against the policy embodied in the Bland-Allison silver law by which the government was required to buy silver and coin into dollars of 412 grains not less than $2,000,000 per month. In 1890, this law being in force and Mr. McKinley being chairman of the committee of ways and means, and thus his party's leader in the house, he gave the weight of these positions to the support of a bill for the increase of this silver purchase to $3,500,000 per month, which was declared to be the whole output of the silver mines of the United States. In defending this bill, Mr. McKinley remarked that "ideal legislation could not be had." He said: "I would have this bill different if I could, but it represents the purpose and the idea, not fully, it is true, which I have touching the silver legislation which is required, and I shall vote for it because it is in the right direction." It is a natural inference that, in his opinion, while the bill was "in the right direction," it did not go far enough. This was the Sherman law, which produced the panic of 1893, and for the repeal of which a special session of congress was called that year. In the speech above referred to, Mr. McKinley proceeded to say that the bill was commendable, because "it utilizes every dollar of the silver product of the United States, and to that extent was just to the silver producers of the country," also because it makes a demand for that silver product and would increase the value of the product." He also said:

"Mr. Speaker, no man should hesitate between the two millions a month that we have now and the four and one-half millions a month we shall have under the proposed law. We get an increased volume of money, with safety to the government and the citizen. Pass this bill and what do we have? An increase of $30,000,000 annually of circulation to be put out among the people and into the avenues of business. Vote against this bill and, in my judgment, you vote that there shall be no legislation upon the silver question at this session of congress. That is what I fear it means. We know we cannot have free coinage now, except in the manner as provided in the bill.

"I am for the largest use of silver in the currency of the country. I would not dishonor it; I would give it equal credit and honor with gold; I would make no discrimination; I would utilize both metals as money and discredit neither." (In the house, June 24, 1890.)

It has often been said that the Sherman bill was passed to prevent the enactment of a free-silver coinage law. But it will be seen that they could "not have free coinage" then, and the Sherman bill was as far in that direction as congress would go. In the following year, in making a speech in Ohio, he denounced Mr. Cleveland for having "dishonored one of our precious metals, one of our own great products, discrediting silver and enhancing the price of gold." Even in 1893, but a short time before the repeal of the Sherman law, he was saying in public addresses that "the silver product of the country should not be discriminated against," one of the phrases most often employed by the advocates of silver coinage. Ohio has ever been a hotbed of inflation and financial quackery, and McKinley has not escaped infection.

GOLD AND SILVER QUESTION.

The greatest farce of the age was the position of the Republican convention of Oregon on the financial plank. It is amusing to see how bright men like Mr. Hofer, of THE JOURNAL, gulp it down.—Albany Democrat. THE JOURNAL man was not a delegate to the Portland convention. If he had been he would have voted against the single gold standard and for silver.—JOURNAL. But you are standing in with the plank all right and trying to make it pose as anti-gold, when it is merely an equivocation.—Albany Democrat.

THE JOURNAL has not much use for equivocations by men or parties. It is unqualifiedly for genuine broad-shouldered, all-around American bimetalism, as against one-metalism. It believes bimetalism is the only system that will ever give our country a safe, sound, enduring, honest financial system. Under gold monometalism our country will always be at the mercy of the single-gold standard money-lords of Europe, who can run a corner on gold, draw it out of us, and rob us as they please. It is the system that has reached its highest flower of perfection under the Cleveland administration. Until we back up our gold with our silver, as full legal tender money for final redemption of all debts, we shall be at the mercy of the gold syndicates. But we cannot run our country, even with bimetalism, under free trade or a Democratic "for revenue only" tariff. Protection to American industries and bimetalism must rise or fall together. The bimetalists in the Republican party may be snowed under for a time. McKinley may be elected without a victory for silver. But the cause of silver must win. It must not be killed by being coupled up and dragged down to death with free trade. Let us pray, brother, for some way out of the difficulty. But let us not become free traders in order to remain silver men. Free trade and gold monometalism are twin iniquities in our estimation. We cannot prosper with either. But we can adhere to our principles and let politicians and trimmers steer through the breakers as best they may.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

Following is the report in full of the committee on platform, in the Republican state convention of Oregon, which was adopted and is the party platform:

The representatives of the Republicans of the state of Oregon in convention assembled, call attention to the condition of industry throughout the country, as a proof of the necessity of returning to the policy of the Republican party under which there was general prosperity during thirty years.

We reaffirm the principles of the Republican national platform of 1892, and assert that the results that have followed the change decreed by the election of that year have justified our protest against the national policy adopted by the Democratic party.

We believe that the government should have an ample revenue, with a sufficient surplus over ordinary expenditures to provide for coast defenses, for the steady building up of the navy, and for the constant reduction of the public debt. We believe that the present tariff, with its lowered rates and its destructive and dishonest system of undervaluations and discriminations as to localities, should be replaced by one framed on protective principles similar to that of the McKinley bill and arranged to give ample protection to American wages and American industry, and to restore the reciprocity policy of James G. Blaine.

We have always given protection to our shipbuilders. In late years we have neglected to protect our shipowners. We believe the time has come to restore to the policy of Washington and Hamilton, which, by discriminating duties in favor of American bottoms, secured 90 per cent of our carrying trade to American ships, and which, if now restored, would again revive our shipping and cause American freights to be paid to Americans.

The American people, from tradition and interest, favor bimetallism, and the Republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as standard money with such restrictions and under such provisions to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of the parity of value of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal.

The interest of the producers of the country—its farmers and its workmen—demand that every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the government shall be as good as any other dollar.

Resolved, That we earnestly endorse the proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States, providing for the election of United States senators by popular vote, recently reported from the committee on privileges and elections by Senator Mitchell and now pending consideration in the United States senate.

Resolved, That the application of the Oregon delegation in congress to the president of the United States and now pending before him, praying a modification of his proclamation creating the Cascade forest reserve, is hereby earnestly approved, and we appeal to the president to grant the prayer of our delegation in congress.

We realize the importance and magnitude of the fishing industry on the Columbia river and would recommend that some provision be made for a state hatchery for artificial propagation, and that the laws regulating the closed season be rigidly enforced.

That we endorse the efforts of our representatives in congress to secure repayment to the settlers of Oregon of the excess of $1.25 per acre wrongfully collected by the government on lands located in the limits of the unearned Northern Pacific railroad land grant now forfeited.

The construction of the Nicaragua canal is of the highest importance to the American people, both as a measure of national defense and to build up and maintain American commerce. It is moreover of special importance to our Pacific states and we demand its completion as speedily as possible by the government of the United States.

We hereby endorse the action of our senators and representatives in congress in their endeavor to secure grants of pensions to Indian war veterans.

We pledge the Republican party to a rigid economy in the expenditure of public money; to the reduction of excessive salaries; and the abolishment of the fee system whenever possible, and of all useless commissions; and believe that no appropriation should be made to any school or charitable institution not under the control of the state; and oppose the incorporation into the general appropriation bill of items for the expenditure of public money not authorized by law.

We demand the enactment of rigid restrictions on foreign immigration, both for protection of our country against illiterate and vicious classes from foreign lands and for protection of our labor and preservation to our own people of the remainder of our national domain.

We commend the policy of the Republican party in relation to internal improvements, and in particular in opening our
