Editorial Review.

The hopgrowers are engaged in a legislative struggle to save their industry and deserve the support and sympathy of every person intelligent enough to comprehend the difficulties that they contend against. By combination and co-operation they seek to reduce competition and restore prices to the cost of production.

As one of their speakers has well put it, it is no longer the law of supply and demand that controls prices, but the influence that control supply and demand determine what the producer shall receive. This is the key to the whole situation, and the central idea of the predominant political economy that is coming to prevail in all fields of business and production.

The Hopgrowers' Association then seeks to control, so far as Oregon is concerned, the supply of merchantable hops. Upon their success depends the hope of the grower, more than upon a protective tariff, the gold standard, banking laws or which political party fills the public offices. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that these latter related facts are factors in the case, it is confessed by the arguments of the Growers' Association, by the very fact that growers are organizing to save themselves, that they can not rely on tariffs, coinage laws or any political device for salvation. It is a "condition of things," not a theory, that the hop grower, the wheat grower and the producer generally is an against.

Under the competitive system the unorganized producer, who remains in open competition with all others engaged in the same industry, will fall victim to the organized middleman, the organized transportation companies, the organized capitalist, and the organized manufacturer. The latter can dictate terms to the unorganized hopgrower, and at the same time maul him heavily by increasing cost of his supplies.

The problem then is this: Can the hopgrower get himself out of the competitive class and into the non-competitive class? There is no good reason why he cannot do this. He must do it or his industry will go to the wall. Tariffs and sound money may help him or may not, but in the end he must help himself. He may not be able to accomplish much this year, but he will accomplish more next year. In his efforts he deserves encouragement and substantial support. His success is the success of every family in western Oregon.

The financial stringency in New York will hardly effect the money market on Pacific Coast. But it is an ominous commentary on the passage of the gold standard bill that there should have been almost a panic on Wall Street. The New York stock exchange was wild with excitement caused by the throwing upon the market of millions of dollars of stocks of trust companies.

This was probably caused by the British reverses in South Africa, where the bubble of confidence in English capitalistic inflations and operations of speculators has been badly punctured. The Secretary of the treasury has advanced interest on the national debt nearly a month—$5,500,000. The New York clearing house banks have advanced $10,000,000 to relieve the money market, but the worst is probably not yet known.

If those expedients are necessary so early in the game, what about the boasted security and stability of finance under the gold standard? It is pretended that cutting off the gold supply will have no effect, but it looks very much as if England had killed the goose that gave her a golden nestegg, of one-third the gold product of the world, when she went to war with the Boers.

If gold continues to grow in demand, and that demand cannot be supplied, silver alone can be resorted to for coinage. Unless some change takes place that cannot now be anticipated, bimetalism is inevitable as the last and only recourse for a coin basis. However, it is to be hoped the New York crisis is only temporary, that confidence will be restored, and that the country is not on the verge of another panic.

Which Way?
 Are the children growing nicely? A little stronger each month? A trifle heavier? That's good. Or is one of them growing the other way? Growing weaker, growing thinner, growing paler? If so, you should try Scott's Emulsion at once. It's both a food and a medicine to all delicate children. It makes them grow in the right way—taller, stronger, healthier.

conclusion that while the Englishmen behind the guns may be all right the whisky-guzzling lords commanding them are not of the highest order of intelligence. Section Foreman Prunty is still loyal to the British.

The Journal has decided to skip its customary holiday edition this year, and would advise business men to use everyday advertising instead. The holiday editions are a good thing in a good year, but should not absorb funds that could be better expended for regular advertising.

Roseburg Review: President Hawley has been lecturing on expansion, and his school has been notably contracting. The State University had a president of the national lecturing order who hesitated at no social or economic problem. Fortunately he was induced to remove to other climes, where, it is hoped that his varied talents are more appreciated than they were in Eugene.

Education is an universal necessity. Every man's son or daughter should feel free to get it at a public institution of learning without having to receive any political or religious propagandas on the side.

ONE WHO KNOWS
 Claims the Asylum Superintendent Has a Profitable Private Practice.
 SALEM, Dec. 17.—In a recent issue of THE JOURNAL there appeared an article on the present superintendent of the Insane Asylum in regard to going east with a patient at that institution, and the patient paying all expenses, etc. As this "Wonderful" man is about to return to the "farm," and of course not wanting to have such a "good thing" slip into the hands of some one that would not take the "whole thing," has removed this same patient to Eugene and has found a cheap boarding place for him, where he will be well cared for about ten dollars per month. Of course this "big" man, (the superintendent) has charge of this patient, and draws about $50 per month from his people, (who live in a foreign land) who, we suppose, believe the patient receives the entire amount, and is properly cared for, etc.

Perhaps there are several patients scattered around over the state in the same way, but we hope such is not the case. Anyway it is hot likely that the Dr. would have an inmate of an Insane Asylum running after him, unless he was getting a good share of the monthly allowance.

They say, "this same man has stocked up on fine canned goods and fancy groceries enough to last a long time, and will continue to 'do the state' till January first 1910."

HORSES DROWNED
 Another Ferry Accident Loses Bentley & Co.'s Best Team.
 Early this morning a fine pair of horses found a watery resting place at the bottom of the Willamette.

D. S. Bentley was driving his best team to a gravel wagon, going over to Mint's island for a load. He started onto the ferry soon, above the O. R. & N. dock, but one of the horses took fright and crowded the other off the apron of the scow and was himself dragged overboard.

The bank is steep at this point and pushed by the heavy wagon, the horses plunged into the deep water.

Mr. Bentley stepped with the outfit until he found it useless, then jumped from the hind end of the wagon into the water over waist-deep and got ashore. Team and wagon went out of sight in about 15 feet of water.

This was one of the best teams in the city, and will be greatly missed by Bentley & Co. in their business.
