takes no account of the principle for which Partridge stands and for which the Republicans and Democratic organizations forget their differences and joined hands in the interest of the outraged public conscience. But if Partridge was not enough when he was nominated he has certainly become acquainted since. His public appearances have not invited public attention, they have commanded it. His speeches breathe the fire of truth roused into action by sudden stress of circumstances and emergency. His challenge of the grafters was a magnificent defiance. His declaration that the campaign was that of honesty against dishonesty, and that there is no other issue plucked the truth ripe and ready at the moment of its fruition. His appeal to the people to forget him and everything but the burning shame in which the present administration has overwhelmed the city rose far above the plea of the mere after office. What is rare in public speakers, Partridge's speeches read as refreshingly as they sound. They are full of meat, framed in virile phrase. The sentences are aflame with thought and action. If San Francisco does not know Mr. Partridge it will do well to get acquainted with him.—Sacramento Sunday News.

WALLACE TAKES THE BUN

Preacher Says Sodom Was a Moral City Compared to the Idaho Mining Camp

A dispatch from Wallace, Ida., under date of October 25, says:

The Baptist church was crowded to the doors last night to hear the farewell sermon of H. W. Ferguson, the retiring minister of the church, who preached upon "Wallace, the Sodom of the Coeur d'Alenes."

The conditions prevailing in Wallace were scored by the minister who made a bitter attack on Mayor Rossi, who is serving his third term as mayor of the city; the police department, and the people of the city in general.

"Get out, lest the iniquities of the city consume you," was the exhortation of the minister. "I am going tomorrow, and I advise you all to do the same as soon as you can. So far as I can learn there are no persons residing in Wallace who really want to live here. They all expect to move as soon as they can. Why, even God's sunshine seems to begrudge the few rays it sends down into this dismal, murky canyon during the long months of the fall and winter."

"After seven months of labor in Wallace it is my impression that Wallace wants no preacher. Neither does the city want institutional work or rescue work. Wallace bears the reputation of being a fine place for grafters and fakirs. The moral rottenness of the place is something awful, and the moral stench is such that there is little wonder that not many people want to live here."

"Then there is your mayor. Oh, that beautiful mayor! He is a specimen of Sodom in the Coeur d'Alenes. I was never able to find him until one day I left a note saying that if he had any political aspirations to meet me at 11 o'clock. He met me at 11 o'clock. Do you know that the mayor you elected in a speech welcomed the chorus girls in a burlesque show to the city of Wallace?"

"Wallace supports over 30 saloons, innumerable fraternal orders, but will not support a church. Dan McInnis, the proprietor of the dance hall, is more of a gentleman than some of the church members in this city who pretend to uphold the morals of the community, but who are deep in the mire of iniquity. Some of them stand high in their churches."

"During my residence in this city only once was I offered any money for officiating at a funeral, and that was by a man by the name of Osburn, who does not live here. He gave me $5 to officiate at the funeral of some old friend of his. Judging from the language Mr. Osburn used he was not a deacon in any church, but he paid me for officiating at that funeral, which is something no one in Wallace ever did."

"When I spoke to a prominent business man concerning the awful condition here he advised me to move out if I did not like the ways of the city. There is an old adage about 'When you are in Rome do as the Romans do.' God pity the Romans if they did what the people of Wallace do."

WHAT THE POOR READ

Exclusive of the lowest class, the poor in England are showing an increasing tendency to read; and this reading, strangely enough, is largely of a scientific and serious character. The London Spectator says that in four libraries in the southeast of London only 36 per cent of the books loaned were fiction. "The serious interests of the borrowers are, it seems, chiefly scientific. Popular books on astronomy are very largely borrowed. Entertaining mechanics who want to gain a more thorough knowledge of their trade borrow engineering books. A lecture given in the neighborhood upon wireless telegraphy created a great run upon popular literature relating to that subject. A great deal of history is taken out—for instance, Green's Short History of the English People, and books about the French revolution. A fair amount of poetry, notably Shakespeare and Tennyson, is asked for, and some theology, generally of a modern and popular character, Canon Hensley Henson's books, for instance. The children show a great and rapidly increasing desire for books. Many free libraries have started juvenile departments, and the librarians tell me, with a smile, that they cannot satisfy the children. Those who manage small libraries in connection with churches, schools and settlements all say the same thing. The favorite reading of all these children, many of them belonging to parents who do not open a book year in and year out, is fairy stories. Boys read Henty and Ballantyne to a certain extent and girls Mrs. Molesworth and Mrs. Marshall; children's history books and other serious books connected with their lessons are sometimes taken out; but boys and girls alike prefer fairy stories."

Don't Borrow Trouble.

It is a bad habit to borrow anything, but the worst thing you can possibly borrow is trouble. When sick, sore, heavy, weary and worn out by the pains and poisons of dyspepsia, biliousness, Bright's Disease, and similar internal disorders, don't sit down and brood over your symptoms, but fly for relief to Electric Bitters. Here you will find sure and permanent forgetfulness of all your troubles, and your body will not be burdened by a load of debt disease. At J. C. Perry's Drug Store. Price, 50c. Guaranteed.

A YOUNG LOCHINVAR

A young Lochinvar seems to have come out of the West, and his name is Partridge. He is, incidentally, a candidate for mayor of San Francisco. We say, incidentally, because Mr. Partridge declares that he is asking nothing from the voters for himself, and that he represents only the interests of decent government as opposed to the rascally methods that have been a vogue in the California metropolis for many years. His manner and the manifest earnestness of the man negatives the idea that this talk is nothing better than fulmination of a candidate zealous for his personal aggrandizement or political preferment.

We do not recall a candidate for high public place in California whose words ring so true as those of this man Partridge. The cry was raised in Frisco, and echoed throughout the state that a mistake was made when Partridge was nominated, that he was relatively unknown, and that he did not possess the elements of popularity that are normally looked for in candidates for public office. Perhaps this is all right from the standpoint of the politician whose ambition is to win whatever the hazard. This view
