SHEEP INSPECTOR

BREAKS HIS LEG

Wm. H. Steusloff, one of the owners of the Steusloff market and packing concern, suffered a compound fracture of his right leg just above the ankle by his horse falling upon him while riding near Crabtree, in Linn county, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Collie Gaines, who lived nearby where the accident took place, brought Steusloff to his home and afterwards, in a buggy, took him to the train at Albany. Upon his arrival here, Steusloff went to his home and was attended by Drs. Byrd and Richardson, who while they say the accident is painful, state that it is not dangerous.

We Want Things Cheaper Still.

"The pretense," writes Henry Carey Baird to the Manufacturer of Philadelphia, "that some schedules of the tariff have gone out of date is precisely the reason why they should be maintained. Under these schedules domestic competition has enabled the American producer of finished commodities to improve his processes to such an extent that he surpasses the world in cheapness. Therefore, keep these duties on and he will bring new processes on and bear and furnish his goods in competition with the world, and especially with Germany and England, cheaper still. The proposal to repeal such duties or to cut them down is either idiotic or criminal selfishness, a desire to enable the foreigner to more sharply compete with the American producer. Some years ago it was urged in some Philadelphia quarter that the Distons, being able to expert saws to all the world, the duties should be reduced. I contributed an article to the Manufacturer saying that this was just the reason why the duty should not be reduced, because we wanted the Distons to furnish us saws still cheaper. This brought a letter from the Diston house thanking me for the article."

THE TARIFF REVISERS.

What They Want Is Not Tariff Revision, but Tariff Destruction.

Representative Dalzell, put the case in a nutshell the other day when he showed that what the so-called tariff revisionists were really after was the destruction of the protective tariff system. There is no real force in the movement for revision except that imparted to it by the importing interest or by manufacturers who are willing to sacrifice all protection in order to secure for themselves a larger export trade. The shoe manufacturers, for example, insist that the tariff of 15 per cent on hides increases the cost of domestic hides and thereby increases the cost of their product and by so much impairs their ability to export. They have no great fear of foreign competition in boots and shoes, and are of the opinion that they would gain by putting hides and skins on the free list, even if it resulted in putting boots and shoes on the free list. The tanners, apparently, do not care very much. They are pretty sure to get the chance of tanning all the hides produced in this country, but they would like to see the duty on all tanning material abolished, and the boot and shoe case is a fair example of the manufacturing interest which have joined the free traders in the movement which they call tariff revision.

Mr. Dalzell recognizes that the shouts of the revisers have made some impression, even on good Republicans who are not well grounded in the faith, and that although there is no necessity for or wisdom in making any changes whatever in the tariff, it is necessary to take up the question immediately after the presidential election and have it out. He announces, however, that so long as the Republicans control the government whatever revision there is will still leave the tariff a protective tariff. And that may be assumed, and on that rock and on the question of what duties to reduce and what duties to retain we predict that the forces of "revision" will at once separate into as many factions as there are interests and industries to be affected, and that at the final vote the entire importing interest will vote against whatever conclusion may be reached and denounce the tariff then to be adopted as fiercely as that which is now in force.—San Francisco "Chronicle."

Display of Modern Wealth.

Twenty years ago a ball room in a private house was a rarity; today there are over a hundred houses in New York so equipped. The residences of the Marshall Robertses, the Belmonts, the Spencers, the Schermerhorns, the Anchemutys and those about Washington and Madison squares had ballrooms, but they totalled less, says Gertrude Lynch in the March Broadway, than a dozen, and were really picture galleries. The modern houses of the upper Fifth-avenue set are nearly all equipped with ballrooms which are ballrooms and nothing more. The home of E. H. Harriman has a famous Louis XV ballroom; the Harry Payne Whitney house, the James A. Burden house, the Townsend Burden house, the new Phipps mansion, the Erick house, Senator Clark's residence, the Stuyvesant Fish house, the John A. Drexel house, the Charles B. Alexander house and newly a hundred others have gorgeously decorated apartments, where during the winter, hundreds of guests dance from about midnight on to the first gray of dawn. In fact no modern millionaire's town house is complete without a suit of state apartments, ballroom, banquet and retiring rooms, which occupy one floor of the house, all decorated at a cost of hundreds of thousands and opened only a few times a year.

Iowa Women Score.

Miss Grace Ballantyne, the young attorney who appeared for "Mary J. Coggeshall and others" in their suit against the City of Des Moines, is receiving congratulations from many quarters because of the favorable decision of the supreme court. The women questioned the validity of a special election on a bond issue for a city hall because the votes of tax-paying women were refused and the supreme court has issued a restraining order stopping all work on the new city building pending the final decision in the women's case. Rev. Anna H. Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, says: "This fight of the Iowa women has put more heart into me than anything which has come my way for a long time. I hope they will succeed."

HARRIMAN RESCUES THE ERIE

New York, April 9.—E. H. Harriman has saved the Erie railroad from going into bankruptcy by the timely offer of $5,500,000 to his one time enemy, J. Pierpont Morgan, and this morning Wall street is humming with the news of the apparent reconciliation or at least combination of the two great groups of financiers. The Erie was trembling on the verge of a receivership when Harriman stepped in. The banks had refused to meet its maturing short-time notes. Its directors were in gloom soon. They could see no way to escape from the disaster. Then, to the utter surprise of every man present, E. H. Harriman came forward with his offer to meet the notes. It saved the road. Today Erie stocks showed an added strength for the first time in months. The Erie must be added to the list of Harriman roads as a result of the great railroad owner's action. Previously to this time he was a director but today he looms up as the dominant figure in the road's control. He may do as much for the Erie as he did for the Union Pacific which he pulled out of a similar wreck.

FROM $2 A DAY TO A FORTUNE

(United Press Leased Wire.) San Francisco, April 9.—De Will Levinston McDonald, who was working for $2 a day not long ago, now has $300,000 at his disposal, and with his wife is living in apartments at the Fairmount hotel, surrounded by all the luxuries that wealth can afford. McDonald is one of the six heirs of the late James M. McDonald, who left an estate valued at $1,500,000 and who was formerly president of the Bohemian club and a man about town. His share is $300,000. He is enjoying himself telling his friends of the automobile and race horses he intends to purchase and says it is his intention to live up to the reputation of his uncle.

GERMAN AUTO GOING TO SEATTLE

Portland, Or., April 9.—Hans Koetten, the driver of the German automobile Protos in the New York-to-Paris race is in Portland today enroute to Seattle, where he hopes to find several duplicate parts which is needed on the car now stalled in Nevada. He declares that he has not given up hope of eventually defeating the American contestant. "Wait until that Thomas car hits Siberia where they have no railroad tracks to run on. Then he will be cabling back for duplicate parts and it will be our turn to do some speeding. But it's a good sport and I wish no one any ill luck," he said.
