Death Was On His Heels.

Jose P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts promptly yet gently on the dol, through which the cold is forced out of the system, and at the same time it allays inflammation. Sold by all druggists.

TIM DAVENPORT ON STATEMENT I

SAYS BUT FOR IT RAINING ALL DAY THE WHOLE TICKET WOULD HAVE CARRIED IN MARION.

Silverton, April 24.—(Ed. Journa.)—The genuine Republicans of Marion county appreciate the good work done by your paper in advocating Statement No. 1 and if last Friday, the 17th, had not been such a miserable day, without a doubt, every one of our candidates would have been nominated. The country precincts would have carried them triumphantly if the voters had turned out as they should have done. For be it known that the farming population by a large majority are wide awake to the real issue now presented to them for decision and they will not let go of it until it is decided right. The present apparent upheaval against the election of U. S. senators by popular vote, was shown on election day to be a combination between hungry politicians in the guise of Red-rock Republicans.

All day Friday, in Silverton, and probably in every town in the county, they were actively engaged in electioneering against Statement No. 1 men and for Fulton. Some strong Republican partisans have been fooled by the cry that Statement No. 1 is merely a ruse to elect Governor Chamberlain to the U. S. senate, but very short sighted such Republicans are, and treacherous memories too, to be gulled by the pretense of such a combination, that they are of the old guard, standing solidly for the maintenance of Republican principles. It is very important that those Republicans who are inexorably addicted to voting without discrimination, should begin to look a "leedle out" and not get into the wrong band wagon or follow off a beer cart, which is the fate sooner or later of the yellow dog voter.

Now, I solemnly affirm, that if it be possible to commit a political party to any principle or policy (of which shrewd people sometimes doubt), the Republican party of Oregon has been committed to the election of U. S. senators by the people. It has been endorsed several times by the legislature, almost unanimously, by party conventions and by the lower house of congress several times when it was solidly Republican. It and the initiative and referendum could not have been adopted here without the indorsement of the G. O. P. Mind that how; and further, that said declaration had no strings to it—no ifs or buts.

It did not say, "provided the people elect a Republican," and if any member had offered such an amendment, he would have been speedily examined for lunacy. And yet, that is just what the reactionaries are trying to bring us to. A shrewd woman recently remarked that she thought there ought to be, for men, an age limit to the right to talk nonsense. I endorse the proposal. Properly considered, the reactionaries are not Republicans; and as the Democrats stand as a unit for the reforms we have, they are real outside of both parties—stragglers, derelicts, so to speak. The socialists or prohibitionists would not have them and I do not know where they could go unless the anarchists could employ them.

The results of the late election fully confirm my opinion that the Republicans of Oregon, in the main, are candid men who desire that their party shall be the party of the people, and believe it to be such, notwithstanding its share of errors. That it has been tricked time and again by its trusted servants and the politicians, all will admit, but the rank and file are, in purpose, sound to the core. They endorsed the reform movement and they will not go back on it, even though a few politicians take the back track in company with the liquor trust.

They gave the convention system a half century's trial, and found its representatives too often unfaithful to the general interests, and while they cannot fathom the future to any great extent, they have sufficient proof already to warrant a continuance and extension of the reform measures. From what I have seen lately, I am fully convinced that we are at the beginning of a great and general enlightenment among the common people, as respects governmental affairs. Heretofore they have been employed in partisan politics which has kept their party spirit active and created prejudice inimical to the just consideration of real politics. They have accepted party catch-words as genuine principles and thus became, too often, the stock in trade of self-seeking politicians.

Under the new regime, all this has been or will be abandoned. Their minds will be employed in the consideration of constitutions and laws dissociated from partizanship.

They take the pamphlets containing the proposed laws and amendments and by their firesides or in a meeting called for the purpose, discuss them with reference to the effect they will have upon their own and the general interests. Their partizan feelings are not called into play, and as everybody knows, that the many cannot be the beneficiaries of privilege, there will be in insistence for equality, which is justice, and thus will result a continual approximation to a government of the people, by the people and for the people. Can any sagacious person think of such employment by the millions of minds, without foreseeing that the innermost recesses of social problems will be discovered, the complexities of government be simplified, and the crooked made straight, by such mental concentration? To be sure, there will be contrariety of opinions, conflicts of selfishness, and practical mistakes, but for what better or higher purpose were we destined than to strive and blunder and fail, and thereby build foundations upon which to rise continuously? Well may the privileged classes tremble for their unjust advantages, the corporations for their watered stocks, the trusts for the solidity of their combinations, the standpatters for the governmental favoritism too long enjoyed, and all other forms of greed inimical to the commonwealth, for all must scale down, sooner or later to the legitimate rule of equal rights to all, special privileges to none.

And yet, with this grand progressive prospect in view, we hear some prominent Republicans complaining, lest it be the death blow to the G. O. P., and the loss of their basic principles; while other members of it having in mind its indestructible, original purpose of establishing justice, wonder and query as to the spiritless plight of their complaining brethren.

Many good, quiet, timid people, have no conception of government, except as a scheme to keep everything quiet, to allay agitation, to prevent controversy, to have every fellow be content with his lot, to inculcate the maxim that poverty for the many is the ordination of the Almighty, that charity is the only proper way of adjusting the inequalities in social conditions; and such people want to extend the presidential term, have infrequent elections, and favor any government which will give them peace, law and order.

Poor, good souls! They want to keep things fixed, when by the law of Nature all things are in continual evolution and progression.

Progression is the true American idea; and that means agitation, employment of mind and body. Not by the few, but by the many. Government means much more than suppression of the unruly, the protection of life and property, the maintaining of the status quo. Broadly considered, it is the supreme art of social correlation. And this is impossible of attainment, except by the active participation of the mass, the common people. It cannot descend to them from the few, however highly exalted in all that can contribute to human excellence. George Bancroft said, in a lecture delivered before the Adelphi Society of Williams College: "The duty of America is to secure the culture and the happiness of the masses by their reliance on themselves. It is the confession of an enemy to democracy that 'all the great and noble institutions of the world have come from popular efforts.' It is the uniform tendency of the popular element to elevate and bless humanity. The exact measure of the progress of civilization is the degree in which the intelligence of the common mind has prevailed over wealth and brute force; in other words, the measure of the progress of civilization is the progress of the people. Every object connected with the benevolent exertions of the day has reference to the culture of those powers which are alone the common inheritance. It is alone by infusing great principles into the common mind that revolutions in human society are brought about. They never have been, they never can be effected by superior individual excellence."

No doubt, our benevolent politicians would like to run things, but it would spoil them for any useful purpose. The people will promote thinkers and leaders; not bosses.
