

What the Papers Say of Ruth Craven

One of the best plays seen in many a day. Ruth Craven as an actress leaves nothing to be desired. —Nashville, (Tenn.) American.

The play "A Daughter of Judea" at the Metropolitan last evening was an artistic performance. Miss Craven in the leading role of Leah, the Jewess, was a revelation and her artistic performance will long be remembered. —Knoxville Journal.

"A Daughter of Judea" is good entertainment, strong and stirring. Ruth Craven, the handsome young leading woman is an actress in every sense of the word. Her rendition of the role of the Jewess being a treat long to be remembered. —Chattanooga News.

Ruth Craven as the Jewess in "A Daughter of Judea" at the People's last night was a revelation. She is a great little actress and her Leah was a dramatic triumph. —Memphis Ledger.

Ruth Craven last night demonstrated her ability as an emotional actress. Her work was of high order, clean cut and finished. She has a pleasing personality and is good to look upon and we prophesy is destined to greater triumphs. —Montgomery Advertiser.

Ruth Craven is too well known and popular in Sioux City to need much boosting. She has played a varied line of roles here and demonstrated her great versatility. Last night at the Grand she added another laurel to her wreath. Her Leah, the Jewess, in the "Daughter of Judea" was a superb piece of emotional work. —Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune.

"Toot your horn if you don't sell a clam" is an old phrase but the management of "A Daughter of Judea" does not believe in adopting these tactics. The play is not the best ever, the company the greatest or the star unequalled, nor is it any one of the forty other phrases used in advertising shows of all classes.

Miss Ruth Craven in "A Daughter of Judea."

but it is however, a well written, very interesting play intelligently produced by Miss Ruth Craven and a company of considerable ability. It pleases because it has merit.

"A Daughter of Judea" is a very strong and interesting melodrama, the scenes of which are laid in Austria in the eighteenth century. It depicts the ignorance and bigotry of the peasants and their cruelty to and hatred of the Jews. The play abounds in many strong situations and is of great human interest. The central figure of the play Leah, the Jewess, is a beautifully drawn character of a woman who lives, who loves, and who suffers. In this part Miss Craven, who portrays it, runs the whole gamut of human emotions. She is supported by a company of considerable merit. The costumes are quaint and the scenic equipment, complete.

The day of the romantic drama will never be a thing of the past for there is always a public clamor for ancient costumes and scenes of the old world. It has often been said that our old friends are our best friends and this can easily be said of our plays. "A Daughter of Judea" is by no means an old play but has been adopted from one of the classics by one of our best modern dramatists and combines the old with the new in a way to make it one of the most interesting of modern plays. It is a blending of pathos and humor legitimate in humor and positively thrilling in dramatic intensity. The scenery is massive and true to that period and the costumes are pleasing and quaint. Miss Ruth Craven in title role is an actress of merit and the supporting company is competent. This play will be the offering at the Grand Opera House Saturday, September 17. Seats on sale at box office at 9 a. m.

"Can be depended upon" is an expression we all like to hear, and when it is used in connection with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy it means that it never fails to cure diarrhoea, dysentery or bowel complaints. It is pleasant to take and equally valuable for children and adults. Sold by all dealers.
