CANDIDATE WILSON AND LABOR.

The Capital Journal advised its readers to wait thirty days before making up their minds what to do about supporting anyone for president.

The reason for this was that an unusual condition presented itself, and it was necessary to let the candidates come fully before the people.

This was not necessary in the case of President Taft or ex-President Roosevelt, but it was necessary in the case of Mr. Wilson, the Democratic nominee.

As a college professor, a college president, a writer of books on political economy and history he is a man who has stated his views fully on great questions.

Whether those views harmonize with his platform, whether these views expressed during his long educational career, would be acceptable or not, remained to be seen.

Here is the first round in the battle of Candidate Wilson with the records of Professor Wilson, when he was not a candidate, and the candidate suffers a little.

Congressional Record.

Representative Hill: I was exceedingly glad this morning to read in the paper where I saw that Mr. Gompers and Mr. Morrison and a number of other gentlemen were at Sea Girt consulting with the candidate for the presidency on the Democratic ticket, and I sincerely hope that they asked him to explain some remarks made by him on this great subject in 1909 in a baccalaureate sermon delivered at Princeton University, contained in the Trenton True American, June 14, 1909. It was delivered on Sunday, the day preceding. The text was from the seventeenth chapter of Luke, tenth verse, which, he says, reads as follows:

"We are unprofitable servants. We have not done that which was our duty to do."

Dr. Wilson treated the subject in this way:

You know what the usual standard of the employe is in our day. It is to give as little as he may for his wages. Labor is standardized by the trades union, and this is the standard to which it is made to conform. No one is suffered to do more than the average workman can do. In some trades and handicrafts no one is suffered to do more than the least skillful of his fellows can do within the hours allotted to a day's work, and no one may work out of hours at all or volunteer anything beyond the minimum.

And, gentlemen on the other side, this is your candidate for president.

"I need not point out how economically disastrous such a regulation of labor is."

Let me inject: Last night I rose in my place and asked unanimous consent to place a tariff address of Dr. Wilson, delivered before a tariff commission holding a public hearing for that purpose, held in Atlanta, Ga., in which he aimed to give the official authorities of the United States his views on the tariff. To be sure, that was 30 years old; but he has not changed them since, for he said only a few days ago, or a few weeks ago, in New York that the whole Republican position and platform was "ignorant and preposterous." He appeared in Atlanta as a free trader, and, in my judgment, he is a free trader today, and yet a Democrat refused to allow me to publish the remarks of his own candidate for the presidency on the tariff question. I am giving you now not an opinion 30 years old, but I am giving you a baccalaureate sermon delivered in Princeton three years ago, and it is directly pertinent to this bill.

"I need not point out how economically disastrous such a regulation of labor is."

I commend that to my friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. Wilson, and to my friend from Illinois, Mr. Buchanan.

It is so unprofitable to the employer that in some trades it will presently not be worth while to attempt anything at all. He had better stop altogether than operate at an inevitable and invariable loss. The labor of America is rapidly becoming unprofitable under the present regulation by those who have determined to reduce it to a minimum.

Now, I do not believe that, gentlemen. I do not believe my friend from Illinois, Mr. Buchanan, or my friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. Wilson, are "unprofitable servants" in this country. I know that the men who live in my district, and who are honest straight-forward workmen, members of labor unions, are reputable, as high-toned, as responsible, as industrious and as faithful as any citizen (applause on the Republican side) in it, whether they be lawyers, doctors, presidents of universities, or men working as "unprofitable servants," as he designates, simply because they belong to a trade union.

Mr. Moore, of Pennsylvania: Do you believe that Mr. Gompers believes that?

Mr. Hill: No, I do not. And I think it was high time for him as a Democrat to go to Sea Girt yesterday and try to reach a working compromise with the candidate of his party.

Let me close this up.

Our economic supremacy may be lost because the country grows more and more full of unprofitable servants.

The substance of the above expression is that the organized labor is an unprofitable servant.

The Capital Journal gives the above merely to keep its readers informed of the trend of the campaign.

BOSWORTH RETIRES FROM Y. M. C. A.

F. M. Bosworth, who has served the local Y. M. C. A. so faithfully and well for the past several years, tendered his resignation to the board of directors yesterday, to take effect September 1. Prior to coming to Salem Mr. Bosworth filled similar positions in California, where he will return, but he has not definitely decided what line of work he will engage in. More than likely he will continue the work of the upbuilding of the young men. No arrangements have been made so far to secure a successor for the retiring secretary, as his retirement came as a distinct surprise to the board, as well as all the members of the association.

Mr. Bosworth will be greatly missed from the association, and his separation from the services of the Salem organization will be greatly deplored by all its members as well by a large number of the citizens of the city. However, if the retiring leader of this association can secure a larger field for his services it is the hope of those interested in him that he may succeed in his new field of operations.

HE IS TRYING TO REGULATE LIQUOR SALES

Alderman W. T. Rigdon has inaugurated a very unique method for better control of the saloons of the city. He has visited every one of the 15 saloons and secured a written pledge from the proprietor of each that he will not sell, nor allow his employe to sell, liquors to minors or men in an intoxicated condition. Mr. Rigdon has been led to take the step he has by the attitude of a large number of citizens of the city who have complained to him of the fact that liquor is being sold to minors and drunkards. This is in violation of the law, but is a hard law to enforce, especially as regards a drunken man. A man may come into a place of business and ask for a drink while he is in an intoxicated condition and yet the bartender might not be able to detect that fact.

While Alderman Rigdon is not a member of the license committee of the council, yet from the large number of requests that come to him for action to secure better control of the saloons, he feels justified in taking this step.

Mr. Rigdon feels that all of the responsibility of selling liquor to a drunkard should fall on the saloon-keeper or bartender, but in the case of selling liquor to minors, he feels that a certain portion of the responsibility should be borne by those making application for a drink. In case the bartender is in doubt as to whether it is legal to sell drinks to an applicant, the agreement is such that the applicant will be sent to the chief of police, who will be expected to make the proper examination as to the circumstances or conditions and if a written statement is received the liquor will then be dispensed.

Mr. Rigdon has faith in the proprietors of the saloons of the city and believes that they will keep the pledge, but if they do not he will use his best endeavors to defeat the issuance of a new license to them when they make application for a renewal of license.

An affirmation will be required of those in doubt, which must have the O. K. of the chief of police before it will be honored.

The form of the pledge made by the saloon men and those signing it is given below:

"Whereas, The saloons of Salem are accused of selling liquors to minors and drunkards; and

"Whereas, No denial on our part will be accepted by our accusers; now

"Therefore, We, the saloon proprietors of Salem, Oregon, hereby pledge ourselves to sell no liquors to minors or drunkards, or to any other persons in violation of law; and further, we will keep an account of the names of all minors and drunkards who ask us to violate the law, and we will report the same to the city marshal.

Republicans Must Show Up.

Pledging its support to President Taft and all other "Republican nominees who are Republicans," the executive committee of the Republican county central committee of Multnomah county at a meeting Tuesday night, approved a letter that will be sent to every nominee for state, district and county office, including presidential electors, on the Republican ticket, demanding that each nominee inform the committee "what his exact position is respecting the Republican party and his status therein."

HOW TO ABSORB AN UNLOVELY COMPLEXION

(Phyllis Moore in Town Talk)

The face which is admired for its beauty, must have a satin-smooth skin, pink and white and youthful looking. The only thing I know of that can make such a complexion out of an aged, faded, or discolored one—I mean a natural, not a painted one—is ordinary mercolized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the unsightly cuticle, a little each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until within a week or so it is wholly in evidence. Of course such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots, blotches and pimples are discarded with the old skin. If you will procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use like cold cream every night, washing this off mornings, you'll find it a veritable wonder-worker.

Another valuable natural treatment is a wash lotion to remove wrinkles which can be easily prepared. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1/2 pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you'll find it "works like magic."
