Benefited Many Who Had Tuberculosis

Those who suffer from Consumption are generally troubled with night sweats, loss of strength and night cough. Fresh air, good food, and the proper care of the body are essential to a recovery, but in many cases something else is needed. Eckman's Alternative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite. Before I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast never left me and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been completely cured for ten years. I strongly recommend it.

A RARE BOND OF TRUST

That Which Exists Between Capital Journal Readers and Capital Journal Advertisers

It is notable that advertisers who use The Capital Journal regularly throughout the year, are the best known business men in Salem, and it is equally true that they transact a consistently increasing business.

They advertise in The Capital Journal consistently and persistently--make their appeal intelligently.

They have learned by experience that Capital Journal readers must be reached through the mind--that they are best influenced by offerings designed to satisfy refined tastes, whether the merchandise involved is expensive or inexpensive.

And this is the tribute to the character of The Capital Journal's circulation.

Capital Journal readers are recognized as discriminating--not especially as a class that buys highest priced wares for personal use--but a class that has learned that it is not necessary to be extravagant in order to have the best that its means will provide.

Capital Journal readers have learned this distinction by the exercise of common sense--the kind of common sense that is the outgrowth of education--of wholesome home surroundings--of a natural preference for the better things of life.

The Capital Journal is essentially a newspaper that meets the requirements of progressive people--whether rich or in moderate circumstances--and its clientele is one that the best local advertisers can profitably cultivate with their important store announcements.

A complete list of Salem business men who advertise in The Capital Journal contains those whose names have become household words--whose reputations for fair dealing stand out most prominently. They are leaders in their respective lines. Their stores have been built by continuous conformances to sound commercial principles--by adherence to the finer ethics of buying and selling.

While they advertise to create sales from day to day, they do not lose sight of that which is even more valuable than the profits of the moment--the accumulation of good will--with-out which no business can endure.

This knowledge--which is shared by readers of The Capital Journal and business men who advertise in its columns--forms the basis of mutual faith that operates for the benefit of each.
