Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Homesick Puppy Goes Back to Mother.

The Puppy Refused to Eat.

DADDY had a story about a little dog which he knew would please both the children.

"Would you like to hear of a little dog who was homesick?" he asked.

"Yes," said Evelyn; "we would love to hear about it—that is, if he didn't die of homesickness."

"No, indeed," said daddy; "this little dog didn't die of homesickness, for he was sent home again and then was perfectly happy."

"He was the pet puppy of his mother, and he had told the man who had sold him to a little girl that he didn't want to go."

"The man who sold him thought that the little girl would give him such a nice home, and so she did, but the little puppy wanted more than just a nice home. He wanted his mother."

"Of course the little girl hadn't hesitated a moment about buying him, for he was a beautiful little Boston bull, and she promised him that she would make him so happy."

"He cried piteously at leaving his mother, and she winked and whimpered and begged that he might be allowed to stay. She liked her master's hand, but nothing seemed to do any good."

"Now, when the little girl reached home with her puppy she gave him a great big bowl of the most delicious warm milk and a good puppy biscuit. But the puppy wouldn't touch the milk and biscuit."

"At bedtime the little girl showed the puppy his basket, which was nice and soft and comfortable. She thought that after a good night's rest he would be hungry for his breakfast and feel better."

"But morning came, and the puppy still refused to eat. And, would you believe it, hours passed, and the puppy still would not eat."

"And the little girl decided that the only thing to be done was to take her beautiful puppy back to his mother."

"She ordered her pony cart to be ready for a certain hour, and off she started, holding the puppy by her."

"When the puppy came near his home and began to see familiar sights it was all she could do to keep him in the cart, and when they were right by his home she could not hold him, for with a bound he was out and frisked and jumped over his mother, and she did the same, looking as if they would almost kick each other in joy."

"I guess he had better stay home," said the man.

"Yes," answered the little girl; "this is where he belongs."

CHERRY FAIR QUEEN CONTEST IS NOW ON

Various Interests of Capital City Are Backing Pretty and Winsome Candidates for Royal Honors.

This morning the ballot boxes for the cherry queen contest were distributed and the race for honors begun with Miss Grace Lilly, Miss Eunane Craig, Miss Nell Hargrove, Miss Mary Schultz, and Miss Priscilla Fleming as candidates. The committee considers that it has a particularly representative list of candidates and that the honor will fall to a charming young lady no matter who wins.

Each of the candidates has a strong backing and the race promises to be close and interesting from the start, though the usual number of surprises are likely to be sprung when the final count is made.

Miss Lilly, who was one of the first to agree to be a candidate, is supported by the Elks lodge of this city, and Miss Eunane Craig is promised the backing of the state house aggregation. Miss Hargrove is to receive all the votes that can be corralled by the Pacific Telephone company. Miss Mary Schultz is a high school candidate, and being well-known among the younger social set, promises to make a strong bid for first honors.

Miss Fleming will be supported by merchants of the city. With such forces lined up, all candidates have a fighting chance for the queenship and it will be anybody's race until the balloting ends. There are four ballot boxes, one each in the Spa, the Gray-belle, Patton's book store and the Commercial book store.
