What Happened When Crowd Found the Body of Leo Frank

The following account of what happened after the people of Cobb county, Georgia, had discovered the body of Leo Frank, was written by a staff correspondent of the New York Times:
It appears from the facts known, that Frank was hanged between 7 o'clock and 7:30. From the road the body was screened by the trees.
A horrible sight met the eyes of the first arrivals at the grove, and still more horrible was the spectacle that greeted later arrivals, who found not only the body swaying in the wind, with the gaping red wound in the throat, but surging around it a closely packed mass of men all but mad with excitement and hate.
A brown grass rope about half an inch thick had been thrown over the limb of an oak tree, near the trunk. One end of this rope was thrown around the neck of Leo M. Frank, tied with a hangman's noose, and the other was tied to the base of a sapling twenty feet away.
Frank hung with the top of his head near the limb, his feet about four feet above the ground. A white handkerchief was over his face, the corners knotted at the back of his head. The hangman's knot lay against his right jaw. The wound in his throat, where William Green attempted to kill him at the state farm a few weeks ago, was torn open. The rope was above the wound, but toward the front of the throat, where the wound ranged upward, the rope lay in the wound.
Sleeves Clipped for Souvenirs
Frank's body from the waist up was clothed in a thin white pajama jacket. Worked in the jacket on the left side of the chest were the letters "L. M. F." in red thread. The sleeves of the pajamas had been clipped away with pocket knives by souvenir hunters until both sleeves were gone as far as the elbows.
The arms, thus exposed, hung straight with the wrists handcuffed in front. The arms, hands, and fingers were blue while the left thumb showed the healing cut where Frank had defended himself from Green's knife attack at the state farm.
The body, from the waist down, was wrapped in a dirty piece of brown cloth that looked like khaki, stretched across the front like a shirt drawn tight, and tied by the corners behind. The edges of the cloth barely meeting on the left side.

Viewed by Women With Babies
Around the ankles had been a piece of grass rope, but this rope was cut away by souvenir hunters soon after the crowd gathered.
Before 8:30 o'clock the crowd at the scene had reached great proportions, considering the isolated neighborhood, and more than 100 persons were there, including a number of women, several of whom carried babies in arms. Automobiles came careening, recklessly disregarding life and limb of occupants. Horse-drawn vehicles came at a gallop. Pedestrians came running.
The sight made some women sick. They would shriek or groan and turn their heads away. Other women walked up to the packed mass of men and pushed their way to look at the body without the quiver of an eyelash.
As the crowd grew the excitement increased. One of the early arrivals was a man in a frenzy of passion. He was hunched, coatless, his eyes blazing like those of a machine. He ran to the tree, threw up his hands, clinched his fists, and shook them at the body. His hands would open and his fingers would writhe; his fists would close again and he would shake them at the body.
"Now we've got you," he screamed. "You won't murder any more little, innocent girls. We've got you now. We've got you now."
His voice would rise to a shrill note, then become hoarse, as he chanted his words in sing-song, one imprecation after another.

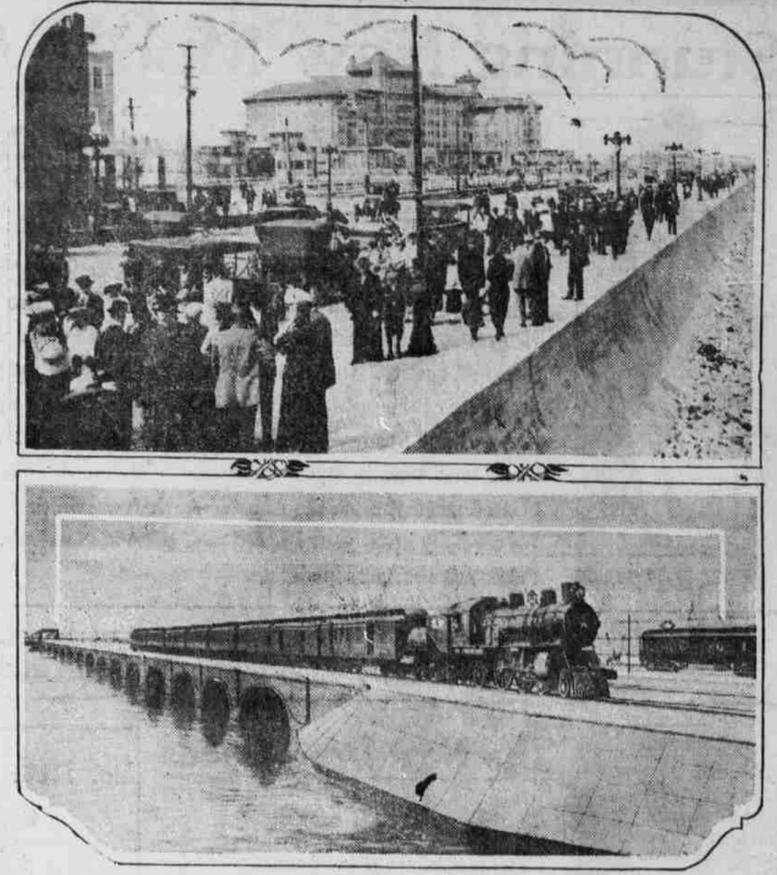

Crowd All But Mad
When he paused for breath some man in the crowd would yell and the throng would join and the shriek would grow and rise higher and higher till it filled the little grove. These demonstrations seemed to fan the fury of the man by the body. His gestures became more and more violent, his raving words came faster and faster, pouring out like a torrent.
"Who won't put any monument over you," he cried. "They are not going to get you. They are not going to get a piece of you as big as a cigar."
The crowd screamed in frenzy and packed closer.
With this demonstration at its height a short, thickset man, with blue eyes gleaming, ran into the crowd, jostled his way through, and pushed up to a place beside the man who was cursing the body. He stood on tiptoe to be seen. "Men, hear me," he said.
It was Newt A. Morris, former judge of the Blue Ridge circuit, who had just come in an automobile to Marietta with Attorney John Wood, of Canton. They were attending Alpharetta court, heard the news early, and came at top speed to the scene.

Former President Ridicules Progressives
Berkeley, Cal., Aug. 28.—Former President Taft poked fun at California progressives while addressing students at the University of California yesterday, although he did not mention the progressives.
"We of the east are quite willing that you maintain here in your state a sort of chemical laboratory for the testing out of various political formulas. We do not object to your doing it if you pay the bill," he said as the famous Taft smile broke into evidence.

BEATS BIRD'S BEST SPEED
An interesting feat in natural history was discovered by James Livville, of Greensburg, Ind., the other day. A sparrow flew up in front of his Maxwell touring car. Livville increased his speed and, with the speedometer registering just 39 miles an hour, caught the bird against the front of the radiator where fan pressure held it until the car slowed down.

GALVESTON'S SEA WALL HOLDS, BUT CAUSEWAY IS CUT IN TWO.

Galveston's sea wall; causeway connecting city with mainland.

The recent terrific storm which swept over eastern Texas, destroying scores of lives and millions in property, afforded proof that Galveston's sea wall was built to withstand the ravages of the elements and protect the city from the same kind of a disaster which wiped it off the map fifteen years ago. For while the storm was terrific enough to break in two the great causeway which connected the city with the mainland, it was unable to tear away the wall.
The most notable result of the destruction of Galveston in 1900 was the raising of the level of the land upon which the city is built to a height to correspond with this wall. Four and a half miles of the wall is now surrounded by a fifty-four foot brick boulevard, one of the most impressive scenic driveways in the world. Galveston is located on a narrow island lying parallel with the mainland. One of the labors of the reconstruction was the building of a two-mile causeway to connect the island with the mainland. This is partly built up from the sea bottom, and partly a trestle bridge construction, while a mammoth lift bridge is located in the center. The causeway accommodates all classes of traffic, including steam and electric railways.
The docks and shipping which make Galveston the largest cotton port in the world, are located on the northern side of the island. The southern, or gulf side, is skirted with pleasure features, including splendid surf bathing the year around. The climate and vegetation is tropical, yet 88 degrees was the average maximum temperature for five years and the winter often sees a temperature of 80. Palms, oleanders, oranges and figs abound.
It took more than a decade to complete the plans for the new Galveston. The wall, fill and causeway rank

THE MARKETS

The bears seem to have the best of the wheat market and prices are barely holding at 77 cents. This market of course is governed entirely by the Portland reports, and when Portland is weak, this situation is naturally reflected in the Salem prices.
The egg market is in a flurry today. On account of the scarcity, several growers are paying 23 cents in cash and 25 cents in trade. Others are holding at the prices of last week. At present, it seems to be a question of how mad the buyer wants the egg.

Hop Picking Begins In Earnest Monday

(Capital Journal Special Service.)
Dallas, Ore., Aug. 28.—Hop picking will be commenced in some yards in different parts of the county today, but in most of the yards the actual work will not begin until next week, when work will begin in earnest. In several parts of the county the yards are reported to be in a very bad condition owing to the presence of large numbers of hop lice, while in other yards the lice have been killed and the vines and hops are in excellent condition. Wages for pickers are lower this year than they have been for several years, only 40 cents per box being offered, where heretofore 50 cents has been paid. Notwithstanding the fact that wages are lower there is no scarcity of pickers.

Frank Woods Buried

The remains of Frank Woods were laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery, west of this city, Wednesday morning, the services being conducted by Rev. D. A. MacKenzie, of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Woods passed away in a Portland hospital last Monday evening after an illness of more than a month's duration, caused by injuries received in being struck by a street car in Portland several weeks ago. Besides one son, Gus Woods, a resident of Portland, he leaves to mourn his death, a mother, Mrs. B. Lavelace, of this city; three brothers, M. V. Woods and L. N. Woods, of Dallas, and John Woods, of Jerome, Arizona, and a sister, Mrs. Holman, of Monmouth. Mr. Woods was formerly a Dallas boy and was raised in this county, coming here with his parents from Pennsylvania when a mere lad.

New Equipment Added

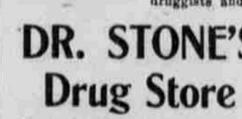

The J. K. Arnsby company has just finished the installation of extensive new machinery in its prime packing plant in this city, and are now ready to handle the enormous prune crop of the county which will begin to come in within the next few weeks. The cost of the improvement will be between $2000 and $2500, and will make the concern one of the most up-to-date establishments of its kind in the Pacific northwest. Manager A. C. Peterson estimates that the yield in this vicinity this year will be about 750 tons, and orders have already been received for a part of this season's pack.

Sailors In Custody Charged With Piracy

Belize, British Honduras, Aug. 28.—Charged with the murder of Captain Messam of the trader Anrokia and with piracy, Joseph Belatore and Joseph Mananto are in custody here today while the port authorities are probing the fate of several of the ship's crew and several passengers.
The officials say that the men held up the ship at sea, intimidated the crew, bound Messam and threw him overboard. It is charged that all the crew excepting the engineer were landed at an obscure point. The engineer, they assert, and the passengers were taken to Cape Gracias where the ship was sold.
One of the women passengers reached Niagaruga and told the story.
