THE MARKETS

There is nothing new in the wheat or oats market. There is but little buying, and no regular market price is established. For this reason, wheat may be said to be selling for anywhere between 70 and 75 cents, and oats from 30 to 35 cents just according to the buyer and seller. This is perhaps the first time in the history of this country there has been so little wheat moving and practically no market. Other markets show no change.
