BETTING IS EVEN ON WORLD'S SERIES

Contenders For World's Championship Are Considered About Equal

By George R. Holmes. (United Press staff correspondent.) New York, Oct. 5.—The Red Sox and Phillies will face each other on the world's series battlefield at practically even terms. From odds of 10 to 6 and 10 to 8 on Boston a week ago, the betting has been brought to even money, with little real coin in sight.

The decline in the sports' estimate of Boston's prowess was the more apparent today, following her double defeat yesterday at the hands of the Highlanders. The fans were plainly disappointed.

Manager Carrigan had worked his two best bats, Leonard and Foster, and they went down to ignominious defeat.

Leonard particularly cracked under the strain, and was forced to retire from the mound in the sixth after he had allowed nine hits and five runs.

He had been dead about 36 hours. Officers at once started to scour the countryside for a trace of the man, who it is thought, shot Brown with his own gun and then made off with it.

What may be a clue came to light during the forenoon when authorities learned that Brown sometime ago had quarreled with a woodpecker named Jess Brown and had threatened to kill the latter.

SENATOR SHERMAN SPEAKS AT THE EXPOSITION

San Francisco, Oct. 5.—A proposal for a constitutional amendment to give congress power to provide uniform regulation of insurance companies in order that the burden on the companies may be lightened, was made here today by Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, addressing the World's Insurance congress.

Senator Sherman, it is understood, will be in the race for the republican nomination for president at the coming convention, and will probably be backed by the entire Illinois delegation.

"The regulations under which life insurance business is done ought to be national and not local," he said. "It has risen to the dignity, importance and power of a national undertaking. It totals, measured by money alone, more than the transportation lines of the United States. No single line of human effort reaches so generally every walk and condition of life. The hundreds of millions of investments that safeguard life insurance contracts, the many hundreds of millions of policies carried, the vast responsibilities entailed are without a single regulation of government of the United States. It is proper now to institute a movement so to amend the federal constitution as to give congress such power. Let it be done intelligently and in the name of justice. A united effort will succeed and temporary defeat must not discourage but serve as the motive for future increased effort."

"We meet under conditions that have changed the world. Even neutral nations no longer feel secure. No treaty seems sacred. Barbaric force is still the substitute for justice in half the world. The destruction of life and material resources is unparalleled. The war debt will exceed the limits of imagination. The taxable wealth and the productive energy of the future are pawned to the present and dedicated to sacking cities and indiscriminate butchery. Who remains to define modern civilization after a year of modern war? All human affairs end. The benediction of peace will sometime hallow the battlefields of Europe. The era of the builder will then dawn but on him will be the unceasing toll of the tax gatherer. As the war has changed the world, so has it changed economic conditions and old methods of living. The extravagance and prodigality of the past are drawing to a close. The spendthrift and the heedless, the idler and the incompetent will have less chance than before. The world will be forced to a higher measure of economy and productivity."

"In the reconstruction of the economic and the social justice fabric following the worldwide change in conditions, life insurance is destined to assume an increased and powerful influence."

"It is one of the greatest instruments to promote self support and protect the family known to civilized society. The legislator who sees in it only an enterprise to be burdened whenever taxes are to be laid has not analyzed well the relation between national strength and private individual support, the solvency of the family or its responsible head."
