Prominent Dallas Woman Buried This Week
(Capital Journal Special Service)
Dallas, Mar. 8.—Funeral services were held in Dallas this week over the remains of Mrs. Lydia Ann D'Lashmunt, one of the most prominent women among the pioneers of this city who passed away at her home here last Saturday. The services were conducted by Rev. D. A. MacKenzie of the Presbyterian church of which denomination the deceased had been a member since the organization of that church in this city. The remains were taken to Salt Creek and laid to rest beside those of her husband who preceded her to the grave.

Mrs. D'Lashmunt whose maiden name was Morris, was a descendant of the Morris family who had much to do with the upbuilding of this country in the colonial days, one of her forefathers being appointed on a committee to select a suitable ensign for the then new country.

The deceased was born in Zanesville, Ohio, in 1829 and at the time of her death had reached the ripe old age of 89 years, 11 months and 5 days. She was united in marriage at Columbus, Ohio, in 1849, to E. L. D'Lashmunt and the family moved to Iowa where they resided several years before coming to Oregon by ox team. They settled in Polk county and continued to make their home here. To this union was born four children, three of whom survive, they being Mrs. H. M. Ellis and Mrs. Virginia Smith of this city and Mrs. Ida Percival of Portland. Mr. D'Lashmunt died in 1888 and the widow has since made her home at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Smith in Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. D'Lashmunt conducted a boarding house in Dallas in the early days and numbered among their friends a number of the prominent men of the state. Senator George Chamberlain, who used to practice in the courts here from time to time always put up at their home and never failed to call on "Grandma" D'Lashmunt when being in Dallas in after years.

Dallas Business House Changes Hands
Ed and Joel Shaw, who have operated the Dallas Meat company in this city for the past twelve or fifteen years, this week disposed of their interest in the business to Portland parties and the business will hereafter be conducted by George Hettling, who has been in the employ of the Shaws for the past year. The Shaw brothers will devote their time in the future to managing a large stock ranch near this city.

CAN SHOW DOCUMENTS TO PROVE STATEMENTS

Raymond Robins Tells This To Senate Bolshevik Investigators.

Washington, Mar. 8.—Raymond Robins yesterday concluded two days of testimony before the senate bolshevik investigators with an earnest plea that American and allied governments take nobody's word on conditions in Russia, but get the facts themselves upon which to base their future policy.

For two days Robins has been battling obvious hostility of the committee in an effort to tell what he saw and heard in Russia as a member of the American Red Cross mission.

Robins closed his testimony with the statement that if any responsible person contradicted him he would produce documents, kept secret until now, to prove what he had said.

Testimony Summed Up
Summed up, his two days' testimony was:

That bolshevism is the world's great evil menace and that America is the only nation that can stem its tide.

That American and allied intervention in Siberia spread the flame of bolshevism and caused it to spread to England, France, Canada and even to this country.

That armed intervention now would deepen and strengthen the hold of Lenin and Trotsky on the Russian people.

That the United States had, and refused, several opportunities to prevent the bolsheviks from getting control.

That at the time he left Russia in May, 1918, the great majority of the Russian people were supporting the bolsheviks.

Get Rid of Lenin
That Russia can get rid of Lenin and Trotsky any time the people wish to.

That if a commission of inquiry finds that the bolsheviks are keeping Russia in chaos, causing massacres and starvation, the civilized world should act, but not until it has all the facts.

Robins told the committee that a commission of inquiry should be sent into Russia to learn all the facts about the situation there. He declared unqualifiedly against military intervention till all the facts are known.

Senator Sterling and Senator Borah became so hostile toward the witness for what they called his bolshevik sympathies that Senator Hiram Johnson, though not a member of the committee, appealed Robins to be allowed to answer questions without being constantly heckled.

Sterling insisted that Robins was trying to encourage the bolshevik movement and asked him whether he didn't think that as a patriotic American he ought to condemn it. Robins replied that he already heartily condemned bolshevik methods and added: "I am trying to tell the truth about it. I refuse to be put in a position of defending atrocities, but I prefer to understand a situation rather than to denounce it. I found more bitterness in the United States against bolshevik atrocities than against bloody Monday and all the long line of czarist persecutions. I would like to see both sides of this question presented. Mere passion and resentment will not take care of it."

WOODBURN CANNERY MEETING SATURDAY

Great Enthusiasm Is Aroused By Various Speakers Who Boosted Project.

About two hundred farmers and berry growers assembled in Moose hall last Saturday afternoon and, after listening to addresses by those fully conversant on the subject of the fruit industry, departed much impressed with the bright future in store for them with the building and operation of a cannery at Woodburn.

The meeting was presided over by Joseph P. Nathman, president of the Woodburn Retail Merchants' association, who explained the call and spoke of the proposed erection of a cannery in this city. The first one called by him to address the assemblage was Roy Graves of Sheridan.

Mr. Graves, after stating that he was rated at $100,000, president of the Sheridan State bank and financially able to fulfill all contracts, said that he proposed sending out a million dollars' worth of canned goods this year. Last year he sent out of Sheridan alone 80 carloads. He was interested in other canneries and proposed to build at Woodburn a cannery that would eventually be one of the largest in the state. Berries were dying out in the east and demand from there was rapidly increasing. He paid out large sums for fruit last year. Work on the Woodburn cannery would begin next month.

Prof. C. I. Lewis, chief of the division of horticulture, Oregon Agricultural college, and vice director of the experimental station, followed with a most interesting and encouraging address. He was the man who started the loganberry juice industry in this state and from his initiative saw it grow to large proportions. He stated that there were from 20 to 50 canneries in the Willamette valley and they transacted a yearly business of $7,000,000. Right around Salem $6,000,000 was realized from horticulture. In Salem last year the canneries employed 15,000 people and did millions of dollars' worth of business; at Eugene $780,000 worth was turned out. This section was nature's place to grow berries, and nuts, these industries in Oregon producing in the past five years from $5,000,000 at first to $65,000,000. The United States had to depend upon us for cherries and pears, and there was no other place in the world that could produce red raspberries and loganberries that would surpass what we put out here. Business with Europe is increasing rapidly for our diversified canned lines. It requires tonnage in shipments and acreage instead of smaller areas should be used for plants. The speaker dwelt upon different varieties of fruits, what kinds to put out, the different soils, the red raspberry needing good soil well drained. He also gave advice as to ever-babbling and shiro. It was a good, instructive talk.

Hon. Sam. H. Brown, the loganberry king of Gervais, also added to the enthusiasm in his fine address from a loganberry grower's standpoint. He is a pioneer in that industry and impressed upon his hearers the necessity of proper packing. He planted a yard of 15 acres at first and went into the open market. In 1909 there was an enormous crop and he realized $4000 at 2 1/2c. Then he received 3c, 3 1/2c and a contract calls for 3 1/2c this year. Next year his contract expires. He has now 85 acres of loganberries. With the experience gained by him he advised his hearers to go on long term contracts, so that the growers will know just what they are about. It costs from $100 to $125 an acre to bring the loganberries up to full bearing, which will be in the third year, the second year making a fair showing. He gave advice regarding cultivation and saving moisture. Mr. Brown was the inventor of the bonus system and afterward had no trouble with his 125 pickers. In his opinion there was great advantage derived from having a near market as shrinkage is to be taken into consideration. He was glad to see the great interest shown in the cannery project by the large attendance at the meeting, as it would be much better than when hauling a distance. The juice factory should also be re-membered and he believed there was room for both plants to prosper. He paid out last year on his loganberry yard $11,500 and thought the farmers would be foolish to go into grain when berries brought much better returns.

W. H. Egan, another prominent horticulturist, was pleased to see the efforts made for a greater Woodburn. He thought a cannery here was practicable and will obtain results. Mr. Graves successfully operated three or four canneries. Woodburn was the hub of the railroad system, alongside of the Pacific highway and laterals reaching out in every direction. It was favorably situated geographically as to other cannery locations. He dwelt upon the soils and said that there was sufficient territory to give plants in Woodburn all they could handle and there should be full cooperation between the growers and plants. The growers want the cannery to play fairly and should reciprocate.

The remarks of each speaker were greeted with much applause.

After the meeting a large number at once contracted acreage and others have done so with the representatives this week. Mr. Graves was much pleased with the interest shown and informed the independent that work on the cannery would begin next month. —Independent.

Brigadier General Ansell Reduced To Pre-War Rank

Washington, Mar. 7.—Another chapter in the differences between Brigadier General S. T. Ansell and Judge Advocate General Crowder over court martial trials was completed today with the reduction of Ansell to his pre-war rank of lieutenant colonel as part of the general routine of demobilization.

Reduction in the rank of Ansell, Secretary of War Baker declared, "has no relation to the controversy which has existed with regard to the administration of military justice and clemency." Ansell's friends disagree with this statement.

A good hospital is a valuable asset to any town and will be appreciated by our people. It is a beautiful location. Dr. Fleener has been with us for the past year and has been remarkably successful in his practice. He has decided that Jefferson is a good point for a hospital and we believe he is right. He will take possession of the property next week and will remodel it so that it will have every convenience. It will be several weeks before the alterations are made. —Jefferson Review.
