A reception will be given at the conservatory to Remenyi, the violonist; Sig de Revi Berni, pianist, and Miss Minnie Methot, the favorite soprano, on Tuesday afternoon from three to five o'clock. All lovers of music and students of music in the city are invited. Those who were so fortunate as to be present at the reception when Remenyi was here two years ago will not miss this opportunity to meet him again.

Among the clubs organized this winter was the "Thoebe Elliott Circle," so called by the members after its founder and leader. The first meeting was held December 30, to take up a retrospective study of religions with Barrow's Parliament of Religions as a text book. The subject proved intensely interesting, and the ladies have pursued their course with the same broad and generous spirit which characterized the parliament in Chicago. The last meeting will be held this afternoon at the home of Miss Elliott, and it is with regret that the ladies part. For the Saturday following they have invited the ladies literary clubs of the city to meet with them at the home of Mrs. L. C. Richards, to listen to a lecture given by Professor Fossler, of the university, on the book of Job. The lovers of Goethe who found so interesting the professor's lectures on Faust, will be pleased to have him discuss Job on account of the psychological resemblance of these two characters. Victor Hugo says if all literature were to be swept away except one book, he would wish that one book to be Job.

LIGHT INFANTRY NOTES.

The open drill last Monday night was witnessed by an unusually large number of people, who seemed to inspire the members of the company, as the drill was particularly good. Private Will Jeckell won the "spell-down" after a long struggle; Sergeant Fred G. Plummer being next to the last man to go down.

Colonel Hotchkiss and two members of the National Guard company recently formed at Omaha, Neb., were interested spectators.

Sergeant Hayden A. Myer will act as interlocutor at the minstrel performance at the Lansing theater April 17th.

Private W. A. C. Johnson is visiting his former home in Ohio this week.

Sergeant Will Clark ventured out during the high wind recently and his whiskers have been a minus quantity ever since.

The company will attend the concert of the University Glee club next Monday evening in a body.

A. V. D. Smith, of the Kendall-Smith company has recently made application for membership.

Captain Campbell has announced that at our next open drill there will be a competitive drill between the platoons of the company, commanded by their respective chiefs, Lieutenants Wilson and Gascoigne. The boys in the second platoon claim they will make the tall men in the first hustle hard.

Comrade Victor put in an appearance last Monday night but absolutely refused to drill unless the commanding officer would furnish a couch for him doing the rests.

The minstrel show will be a corker, and the public can rest assured that our First Sergeant, the Hon. P. James Cosgrave will not deliver an oration during the evening.

A MEMBER.

POTPOURRI.

It seems sometimes as though when we had just gotten life's lessons all learned and could begin to see the softening influence which self renunciation had brought about in our natures, we were ready to die.

Experience is a stern teacher, and the only instructor with whom we cannot argue about methods.

The devil masquerades in many disguises, and when in some one of them he worms himself into "our set," and one of our smart friends at once penetrates his disguise; we smile at his sagacity wondering meanwhile how he discovered him so readily.

The world will be better, and the people in it climbing heaven's ladder more steadily, when we hear more preaching about how to live, and less about how to die. Life is what we must deal with now. Attend truly to that, and the dying will take care of itself. The trouble is, people have got heaven too definitely located.

I hope if there's anybody ever intending to make a fuss over me, they won't wait till I'm dead before they go about it. I'm sure I shall not care two raps then for anything they say. Maybe I do care now; none of us but may expect a few tears, some flowers and palms, a little display of affection and appreciation after we are gone. Give me some pansies when my heart aches now; a little tenderness when the way is hard; a warm, strong hand clasp when a big wave comes which threatens to overwhelm me. Never mind waiting till you can send a cross of tube roses, or a floral "Gates Ajar." Their perfume and their sentiment will not touch my heart then.

I want my flowers now.
