There is an officer at West Point whose beauty is a thing to dream of, a fact of which he is very well aware. As a rule, girls do dream of it, asleep and awake, but here is a story of one who did not. As every one who visits West Point knows, cadets are after church marched to barracks, dismissed and permitted to scuttle back as hard as they can to the church steps, where they join the girls of their choice and take them to walk. The post officers, of course, take their pick in the meantime. One afternoon the beauty had intended promenading with the girl who did not dream, but, feeling sure she would wait for him, paused to chat with the wife of a fellow officer. In the meantime a canny cadet walked off with the girl. Lieutenant — let his temper get the better of him and in his disappointment said aloud to the lady at his side: "I don't see why Mrs. — has Miss — up here. She has the fever so badly she would fall in love with an army mule." The girl happened to hear this gentlemanly speech, and stopping an instant, said very gently: "I do not see what ground you have for that statement, Mr. —. I have never been in love with you."

The farewell reception given to Father Nugent last week was a genuine expression of regret from his friends both Catholic and protestant. His is a cheerful, sympathetic, jovial nature that makes friends and holds them no matter what betide. They were all sorry that Father Nugent was leaving and were not backward in saying so. He has gone to make a visit to the old coun-
