The Iowa amendment is to be given another hearing in the supreme court.

The British soldier will no longer be distinguished from other soldiers of the world by his red coat. An order has been issued changing the color of the uniform gray.

The latest bee to vocalize in Mahone's bonnet is the notion that he can be candidate for vice president next year. High tariff and disruption of the South make up his platform. Pennsylvania and Virginia will present his name to the convention.

Joe Brady has been found guilty of the murder of Cavendish and Burke, and has been sentenced to hang May 14th. The evidence against Brady consisted of the direct testimony of the informer Carey, who identified him as one of the gang organized to commit the murder, and a good deal of circumstantial evidence. Brady stoutly denies his guilt and asserts his innocence.

Secretary Teller has decided that the granting of the right-of-way to the C. M. & St. Paul railroad company must be ratified by congress, and holds the money paid by the company subject to such action as may be taken by congress. The company is, however, continuing the construction of its road through the Sioux reservation, and the Indians are becoming clamorous for their money.
