GREENVILLE, KY., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1910.

Clean Hands.

Most persons who take any pride at all in the preservation of habits of ordinary cleanliness take it for granted that their hands are clean, for this would seem to be the very foundation of personal decency. In all cities the large department stores, as well as the drug-stores, are fitted with a vast assortment of things that are solely for the care of the hands,—manicuring tools, files, polishers and whiteners,—leading one to suppose that much thought and care are directed to the beautification of the hands, and as a natural deduction that here, at least, cleanliness might come even before godliness.

It is said to be obliged to suggest, nevertheless, that most persons have hands that are not washed often enough and not washed thoroughly enough.

The bacteriologists tell us that if half a dozen people simply dip their hands into a basin of water, and then remove them without any effort at cleansing, the water will be found to swarm with bacilli. One shudders to think what would happen to that water if a few of the average cooks or bakers or handlers of fruit should dip their hands in it.

It is the food question that makes this matter of clean hands so vital. All the food we eat must first pass through human hands, and sometimes through many of them. It has been proven that typhoid fever can be transmitted to others by a person who has long ago recovered from the attack, and that it may be and is done through the agency of dirty hands. A case has been reported where a cook infected member after member of the families she worked for, although she had been a well woman herself for years.

As to food, we are perhaps more at the mercy of our cooks than of any one else. The food may be, and probably is, not really clean when it is delivered at the kitchen door, and it rests with the cook herself to handle it and clean it that it shall be free from germs when served to the family.

Some dirty hands are harmless, and some apparently clean hands are dangerous. A hand covered with the soil of gardening may be a terrible sight, and yet there may not be a dangerous germ on it, whereas the pretty hand of the girl who goes out without gloves and holds a car strap or touches a railing may be invisible soiled with teeming multitudes of germs, some of which she will convey to her mouth with the next piece of candy she eats.

Hands should always be most carefully washed before food is touched, never mind how harmless the previous occupation may seem; and gloves should always be worn when one is outdoors.

To Save Life and Health.

Some months ago there was set forth in a bulletin of the federal bureau of labor the results of a scientific inquiry into the subject of injury to life and health by the white phosphorous match industry.

In nearly every civilized country except the United States the use of white phosphorous in the making of matches is prohibited by law. The cost of production is increased only about 5 per cent by the adoption of substitutes for white phosphorous, but because of competitive conditions one manufacturer cannot adopt the safer and more expensive method unless all will do the same. The leading manufacturers of matches in this country, it is said, would welcome any legislation that will put an end to the use of white phosphorous in their industry.

In his recent message to congress, President Taft had the following to say on this subject: "I invite attention to the very serious injury caused to all those who are engaged in the manufacture of phosphorous matches. The disease incident to this are frightful, and as matches can be made from other materials entirely innocuous, I believe that the injurious manufacturer could be discouraged and ought to be discouraged by the imposition of a heavy federal tax. I recommend the adoption of this method of stamping out a very serious abuse."

Legislation in harmony with this wise recommendation ought to be enacted at the present session of congress. The imposition of a prohibitive federal tax on the manufacture and sale of matches containing white phosphorous would constitute the best method of dealing with the problem.
