BALLOON RECORD FOR YACHTSMAN

Leroy Taylor of New York After Distance Mark.

WACO, TEX., TO MANHATTAN.

Possible to Cover Air Line of 1,800 Miles in Forty Hours—Leo Stevens, Professional Aeronaut, to Accompany Clubman to Beat Count de la Vaulx's Flight of 1,193 Miles.

Hope of breaking the world's record for balloon flights, which has stood for ten years, possesses Leroy Taylor, a member of the New York Yacht, the Larchmont Yacht, Lambs and other clubs, and he will try to bring the trophy to America by a flight to start within the next few weeks from Waco, Tex.

His associate will be Leo Stevens, a well known professional balloonist. The balloon is to be the largest spherical one ever made.

Waco was selected as the starting point after much consideration, in which the meteorological observations of the weather bureau figured largely. Favorable wind currents will give a balloon ascending there the longest possible flight in the general direction of New York.

Won't Face Ocean Dangers. Waco is sufficiently inland almost to obviate the danger of being blown out to sea. There are few mountain ranges to be passed, and these are of secondary importance so far as size and effect upon winds are concerned.

Again, Waco is within the zone of comparatively steady blowing winds at certain seasons of the year. It is in the hope of getting one from the southwest that the flight has been timed for January.

The balloon will carry water and provisions for a month. This is considered essential, as long stretches of desert land must be passed over and the aeronauts may have to land where water and food are unobtainable.

Taylor is an enthusiastic amateur at the balloon game. He has been in several competitions and recently flew from Pittsfield, Mass., to a point near there in a snowstorm. He helped organize the fliers among members of the New York Yacht, Larchmont Yacht and Lambs clubs who are interested in balloons or aeroplanes.

The present record for length of flight is held by Count de la Vaulx, who with St. Victor rode from Vincennes, France, to Korostychev, Russia, 1,193 miles, in October, 1900. They were not in the air long enough, however, to give them the endurance record. This is held by Clifford Harmon, who in October, 1910, in a flight from St. Louis remained aloft for forty-eight hours and twenty-six minutes, though he covered nowhere near the distance the Frenchman did.

Just Missed Records. In the same month Hawley and Post made their sensational flight from St. Louis. It will be remembered they were lost to the world for about a week; then their safe landing was reported from the Canadian backwoods. It was established that they had remained aloft for forty-five hours and fifty-six minutes and had covered 1,171 miles, both performances just short of world's records.

On an air line the distance from Waco to New York is approximately 1,800 miles, which under highly favoring conditions could be covered readily in less than forty hours. This would mean traveling at an average speed of a little less than forty miles an hour. The balloon now being built is being developed along lines that it is hoped will permit it to remain aloft from sixty to seventy-two hours. The ordinary duration of a balloon's gas charge is about forty-eight hours.

The craft will take months to build. It will have a lifting power of 33,000 pounds. As the bag and basket carrying two men and fully equipped will weigh about 5,000 pounds, this will allow 8,000 pounds of ballast. The bag is built of two thicknesses of special linen, with rubber between. It has been found that linen is far better for such use than silk, not alone on account of its greater toughness, but because the silk is a too ready conductor for electricity, with its attendant danger to the gas.

WONDERFUL SCHOOL RECORD.

Four Children of One Family Punctual For Thirty-two Years.

Few families can boast of the school attendance record of the four children of J. R. Dannatt, assistant overseer of Newchurch, Isle of Wight, who have been connected with the local school for seventeen years. They have attended for an aggregate of thirty-two years and one month without missing a single attendance. The record is as follows: Harry Dannatt, five years and five months; Charles, ten years and five months; Nellie, seven years and ten months; Ada, eight years and five months. The school is about two miles from the family's residence, and the distance traveled by the quartet in journeying to and from school exceeds 30,000 miles.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidney, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., 110 West Broadway, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SHE LOVED SNUFF.
 Remarkable Will and Funeral of a Queer Englishwoman.
 The will of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, which is preserved as a curiosity at Somerset House, England, is a tribute to the delights and consolations of snuff. The testatrix directed that in her coffin should be buried with her all her handkerchiefs and sufficient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to bear the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, and at the door of the testatrix's house were to be placed two bushels of the same quality of snuff for gratuitous distribution. In order to insure the carrying out of her wishes the testatrix made the legacies given by the will dependent upon an exact and literal fulfillment of the conditions above named. In closing she bade all concerned to regard snuff as the grand cordial of nature.

Stevenson Obligated.
 Robert Louis Stevenson once sent the following quaint letter to an auto-graph hunter:

You have sent me a slip to write on. You have sent me an addressed envelope. You have sent me a stamped. Many have done as much before. You have spelled my name aright, and some have done that. In one point you stand alone; you have sent me the stamps for my post-office, not the stamps for yours. What is asked with so much consideration I take a pleasure to grant. Here, since you value it and have been at the pains to earn it by such unusual attentions—here is the signature.
 ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

 It was at a Fourth of July meeting in a little city. The mayor, William Smith, rose and at dignified length read the Declaration of Independence. There was a pause; then from one of the mayor's old schoolmates came the loud whisper: "Bill never writ that. He ain't smart enough."—New York Times.

Toned It Down.
 "King Edward," said an English visitor in New York, "hated snobbishness. To show how ridiculous snobbishness was he used often to tell about an alphabet book of his childhood."
 "This book had alliterative sentences arranged under each letter, thus:
 "Callous Caroline caned a cur cruelly."
 "Henry hated the heat of heavy hats."
 "Under the letter V came the facetious sentence:
 "William Vilkins viped his veskit."
 "But the young prince's snobbish tutors thought this sentence too vulgar and low for their charge and accordingly they substituted for it the more refined and genteel line:
 "Vincent Vining viewed a vacant villa."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA
 Genius and Mediocrity.
 Cornelle did not speak correctly the language of which he was such a master. Descartes was silent in mixed society. Themistocles, when asked to play on a lute, said, "I cannot fiddle, but I can make a little village into a great city." Addison was unable to converse in company. Virgil was heavy colloquially. La Fontaine was coarse and stupid when surrounded by men. The Countess of Pembroke had been often heard to say of Chaucer that his silence was more agreeable to her than his conversation. Socrates, celebrated for his written orations, was so timid that he never ventured to speak in public. Dryden said that he was unfit for company. Hence it has been remarked, "Mediocrity can talk; it is for genius to observe."

GROTESQUE NAMES.

Burdens That Innocent English Children Had to Bear.

In England, as in other countries, thousands of people go through life cherishing a grudge against their parents for giving them absurd or incongruous names. It was most natural that a demure and pretty girl in a north suburb should feel resentful when she had to answer to the name of Busybody, given in honor of the winner of a race fifteen years before. Among the names registered at Somerset House are Ails and Graces and Nun Nicer, which were innocently borne by two little girls who found them most embarrassing in after years.

The appalling name of Wellington Walseley Roberts was borne by a young man who, in disposition and appearance, was anything but militant, and as little likely to win fame on the battlefield as his predecessors Arthur Wellesley Wellington Waterloo Cox and Napoleon the Great Eagar.

However, even these names, inappropriate as they may be, are to be preferred to Roger the Ass, Anna (sic) Domini Davies and Boadicea Basher.

To parents of large families the advent of another child is not always welcome, but it is scarcely kind to make the unexpected child bear a token of disapproval. It must be rather terrible to go through life, for example, as Not Wanted James, What Another, Only Fancy William Brown, or even as Last of 'Em Harper, or Still Another Hewitt. And yet these are all names which the foolish caprice of British parents has imposed on innocent children.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Price of a Life.
 According to Anglo-Saxon law, every man's life, including that of the king, was valued at a fixed price, and any one who took it could commute the offense by a money payment upon a fixed scale. The life of a peasant was reckoned to be worth 200 shillings, that of a man of noble birth 1,200 shillings, and the killing of a king involved the regicide in a payment of 7,200 shillings. It has been pointed out that the heir to the throne could thus get rid of the existing occupant by murdering him and thereafter handing over the fine, according to the scale, to the exchequer, when his offense would be purged and his money would come back to himself, for in those days the sovereign received all fines as personal perquisites. There is very little doubt that these rough means were practically applied in the case of some rulers of England in the pre-conquest period.—London Telegraph.
