

VESTS

Almost the Only Chance a man has for a little gaiety in his clothes is his vest and scarf. It's a relief to lay aside the vest that matches the suit occasionally and come forth with a "Fancy Vest" that gives dash and snap to one's dress.

Never before in Pensacola has such a choice assortment of these garments been shown. They are here waiting for wearers. Come see them.

TERSELY TOLD.

R. C. Snipes, of Tallahassee, was here yesterday on business, and a registered guest of the Escambia.

Col. F. G. Hecker, of Century, one of the most prominent men of that thriving little city, was in Pensacola yesterday on a short business visit.

W. M. Curtis, of 214 East Gadsden street yesterday exhibited at The Journal office some fine samples of strawberries grown in his front yard. He planted some of the vines in a barrel in his yard, watered them as they needed it, and he now has some very luscious fruit.

C. M. Darling and C. C. Murphy, of Jackson, Mich., expert bicycle riders, reached the city yesterday from a trip around the United States for a purse of $5,000. They have already visited twenty-six states and four territories within the past eleven months, and expect to pass through the remainder during the next seven months, as the time limit is eighteen months for the entire trip. The conditions are that they will neither work, beg, borrow or

JIU JITSU TO BE TAUGHT IN GOVERNMENT ACADEMIES

JOINT BOARD OF ARMY AND NAVY MAKE RECOMMENDATION AND IT IS ENDORSED BY PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY OF WAR.

By Associated Press.

Washington, March 31.—The war department has made public the report of the joint board of army and navy officers convened by special orders of February 8 to take into consideration the physical training of cadets at the military academy and of midshipmen at the naval academy. The report is endorsed by President Roosevelt, who directs that the recommendations be carried out and also that a further report on progress be substituted to him sixty days hence. Secretary Taft approves the recommendations except as to the suggestion that the sword of the army be made part of equipment of every ship in the navy for use of officers and landing parties.

The report is very long. Its most important feature is the recommendation that the Japanese Jiu Jitsu be incorporated in the course with boxing and wrestling. The board reports that it is not of great value as a means of physical development, but the knowledge of the system would inspire the individual with a degree of self-confidence. The board recommends that physical training be extended over the four years' course at each academy instead of one year as at present. In discussing the use of swords and after recommending their use on ships, to which objection is made by Acting Secretary Darling, the report says: "As regards the army, it may be said that as far as the evidence at the disposal of the board goes, the sentiment of the army is largely against the use of any sword at all by officers of the field; the idea being to replace the sword by the revolver. This was the practice in the Philippines by almost universal consent and without any orders in connection therewith emanating from superior authority. "This widespread opinion against the sword and in favor of the revolver; only is founded upon service under abnormal conditions, in a country largely underbrush and against a foe who rarely stood against a determined

Chief White, of the fire department, has had printed and is distributing to his friends, neat cards, which bear not only a handsome picture, but also the correct numbers and location of all fire alarm boxes in the city. The cards are very convenient, as they contain information regarding the department and are highly appreciated by those fortunate enough to secure them.

Chicken thieves are again in evidence and a number of residents have missed fine fowls during the past few days. Wednesday night the home of R. A. Hyer was paid a visit and three fine bronze turkeys were stolen. The police are on the lookout for the fowls, but as yet have secured no clue.

On account of the many bluejackets now ashore Marshal Schad has increased the efficiency of the police department to a considerable extent by adding a number of extra officers. These are mostly stationed in the lower section of the city, where in some instances as many as three and four officers are placed upon one beat.

advance, and with a sword which itself was an inferior weapon.

"A careful investigation of the fighting in the Russo-Japanese war, under modern conditions as regards fire arms and under greatly improved conditions as regards artillery fire, has shown conclusively that the sword is not a weapon of the past.

"The increased killing power of the magazine rifle and rapid-fire field guns has operated to force both the Japanese and Russian armies in order to minimize their losses to make many night attacks which are not surprises by small bodies of troops, but movements of divisions and armies in battle formation. The result of this development has been to force the frequent employment of the bayonet by the enlisted men, and of the sword by the officer and to increase their importance as fighting weapons. The losses due to 'cold steel' in this war will probably never be accurately known, but enough has already been reported officially on both sides to show that the sword has been effectively used, particularly in these night attacks; these being facts, it follows as a corollary that the sword adopted for officers of the army should be a fighting weapon and not merely a badge of office.

Other points of interest contained in the report are these:

"The training of the students as future instructors in physical training.

"The board believes that the best physical development can be obtained only by a study of the physical condition of each cadet or midshipman and the use by him of exercises such as will tend to remedy his physical defects. This involves the careful and periodical examination and measurement of each individual and the prescription for him of suitable exercises.

"The board is thoroughly convinced that in order to secure the proper physical development of the average student a minimum of time devoted to compulsory physical exercise is two hours each week throughout the entire course.

"The regular practice of judicious and healthful exercises by cadets and midshipmen throughout their four years' course will develop habits and exercise in youth which will tend to be prolonged into later life and thus have a marked effect in raising the standard of physical condition and physical endurance in the officers of the united service.

"The board finds that the present force of instructors in physical training at each academy is adequate to its needs, even with the limited amount of time now devoted to this work. With the extension of time recommended above at least, three additional instructors will be required at each academy."

GOOD ROADS EXPERT REACHES THE CITY.

A. S. Mann, the Good Roads expert, who has been building sample roads throughout the state for the government, reached the city Thursday night from Jacksonville. He is here for the purpose of building a sample mile of road in this city, in order to instruct the road superintendent and others on the best manner of building streets.

This is the outcome of the correspondence between Mayor Welles and Col. A. S. Mann, the latter being very prominent in securing the appropriation from the government.

A rock crusher will be located at the corner of Main and Jefferson streets, and the rock after being placed in condition will be used in making any street that the mayor may designate.

The sample street building will be one mile in length but it has not yet been definitely decided which street will be utilized.

ANIMAL PECULIARITIES.

Fish and Crabs That Can Imitate Their Surroundings.

Many insects, birds, animals and even fish and crabs are wonderfully clever imitators. They will take upon themselves the color, shape or position of their surroundings so perfectly that neither friend nor enemy can discover their whereabouts.

There is a fish to be seen in the kelp beds about the island of Santa Catalina which has a clever way of making itself invisible. The body is slender, with a pointed head and prominent eyes. Along the back is a continuous frill, which is the dorsal fin, white, opposite, the anal fin is equally ornamented. The fish vary in color. Some are amber, others orange or vivid green, while some have two hues combined, dark and light green or olive and yellow. These peculiarities of form and color render the fish marvellously like the kelp leaves among which it seeks protection.

A number of these fish were placed in the tanks of the zoological gardens, where they might be observed. They showed great uneasiness, some of them even leaping from the tank. Another tank was prepared, where the natural surroundings of the fish were imitated as nearly as possible. A branch of macrocystis, with leaves hanging in the water, was suspended over the tank. The most uneasy of the fish were placed in the new home, and their change of feeling was soon evident. One swam at once to the kelp leaves and poised itself, head downward. Another, with head poised upward, became a remarkable imitation of the hanging leaves in shape and color. The fish made no further effort to escape.

Another inhabitant of the kelp beds is an olive green crab, which clings to the under side of the kelp tangles. This crab also showed great uneasiness when it was placed in a tank. When the kelp was introduced it crawled upon it and was at once almost invisible, so much did it resemble the kelp leaves. Another crab makes itself look exactly like a rough stone. When it is alarmed it draws up its legs and appears a bit of inanimate stone.

Several deep sea spiders which had been found at a depth of 800 feet were kept in a tank for several weeks. When taken from the dredging net they were a dark brown, though presumably the spot where they came from was so dark that they could scarcely have been seen. Yet even this type of apparently sluggish life had sufficient intelligence to realize that in the light of the tank it was a conspicuous object, so it began to add seaweed to its back. The seaweed was plucked, then passed to the mouth and finally attached not to the back, but to the point of the shell above the mouth so that it fell over the back like a gorgeous plume, making the crab very conspicuous. But when it was startled the plume of seaweed would point upward and the crab would become a rock with a tuft of seaweed growing upon it, well calculated to deceive the most observing enemy.—New York Herald.

NO MONOPOLY OF BRAINS.

This is the Age of Opportunity For the Able Man.

One of the many hopeful signs of the times is the apparent decay of the breed of so called great men, those mighty personalities that in former times stood out like a solitary tree in a vast prairie. The reason for it, of course, is the distinction of all those old time monopolies of brains which stunted all human beings except a few who by chance rather than by superiority of fiber grew and developed. There are thousands, literally thousands, of men now living who if they had lived a century or so ago and had done a work similar to that which they are doing without any very sonorous fanfare upon the trumpets of fame would have been the talk of the world and the main topic of history. And how many of the so called great achievements of so called great statesmen, soldiers and thinkers of former times would be impossible today because those achievements depended chiefly upon the ignorance and incapacity of the overwhelming mass of the men of their day!

Truly this is the age of opportunity. —Saturday Evening Post.

Swimming Elephants.

The elephants of Burma, in India, are used for a variety of purposes. Throughout the day they work steadily as laborers in carrying the great timbers from place to place, a single elephant doing the work, it is estimated, of a score of men. Their great diversion in hours of rest is bathing, and they take their baths in a curious way. The keeper takes his place on the back of an elephant and thus placed makes a tour of a great lake or river, the huge animal swimming under him at a surprising rate, while he is kept high and dry above water.
