

HOUSE SHIP SUBSIDY

Members Stand One Majority Against Measure Without Speaker's Vote.

TRY TO PASS BILL AT THIS SESSION

Democrats, Organizing Fight With Some Republicans, Determined Never to Support Bill.

The House of Representatives is a tie on the question of ship subsidy. That is the conclusion of the Democratic agents who have been trying to figure the exact alignment of forces.

The Administration is going to try hard to force the measure through Congress at this session. The powerful interests that have supported it in the past realize that with a Democratic House coming in, this is the last chance for a number of years.

Messrs. Spight, of Mississippi and Alexander, of Missouri representing the Democratic majority, are putting in their best wits to line up all Democrats against the bill. They will liberally vote alone that way, according to the advice of the Democratic whips.

On the Republican side the defection of insurgents is much larger. Considerable numbers of them are determined never to support the Humphrey bill in any form.

In both houses, the opposition is determined to kill the measure at any cost, and as the session must expire by limitation, it is calculated that a filibuster will be "easy money."

But that does not mean that the Democrats are getting plans neatly laid to use the Lorimer report as a buffer whenever they want to talk down anything.

It is quite the regular and accepted thing for the "organization" in the Senate to have a legislative make-talk always at hand, and to use it to prevent objectionable measures being considered.

Democrats Organizing Fight. But as to ship subsidy, the House Democrats are as seriously as if there were no assurance of the Senate talking it to death.

Free ships. A 5 per cent discriminatory tariff duty in favor of goods imported in American bottoms.

A heavier tonnage tax on foreign vessels, somewhat as provided in the Humphrey bill.

This program is satisfactory to a number of the insurgent Republicans, but the ship subsidy advocates will never agree to free ships, because they insist that a subsidy which permitted ships to be built in the United States would fail to give protection to the American shipbuilding industry.

The Democrats reply that $5,000,000 a year in subsidies would add a few vessels to our navy, but that it is a 50 good ships, many of them capable of employment as naval auxiliaries.

SCOUT FLEET READY FOR WARSHIP CHASE

Big Battle Game at Sea at Height When Cruisers Sail.

Seven scout cruisers, the "eyes" of the navy, are ready to slip out of Hampton Roads at a moment's notice to herald the approach of the hostile battleship fleet of sixteen dreadnaughts, that today, having assembled off the Scilly Islands, turned their bows westward for a "raid" on the Atlantic coast of the United States.

War is on. It is a war of brains, not of bullets and blood, for the sixteen battleships are all flying the flag of the United States, and the war is between the men of the scout cruisers and the crews of the battleships, for honors in the navy's most recent war game.

By January 15 the battleship fleet must reach Guantanamo, Cuba, the winter rendezvous. There will be opportunity for the fleet to appear west of the Cape Verde Islands, Boston or New York unless its coming is detected by the scouts and the position of the fleet and its apparent intention to strike at a vulnerable point on the coast line made known to the army.

The Navy Department, in arranging the battle game, was in its instructions to Rear Admiral Beaton Schroeder, commander-in-chief of the "enemy," were sent instructions to reach the Atlantic coast line without detection.

Both enemy and defenders have arranged a secret wireless code for communication with one another. The fleet, to be effective, will remain intact, but will avoid the routes of the trans-Atlantic liners.

The scouts are not expected to put to sea before Monday, and when they do go forth it will be to cover a wide range of territory.
