TRENCHES ON SOMME FRONT ARE FIXED UP

Captured Dug-outs Are Found to Be Like Hotel Rooms in a Large City

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(Special Correspondence.)—Here are a few of the vivid stories told by the men now home who have taken part in the big advance:

"The first dugout I went into when we captured the German trenches was fitted with electric bells, with wires communicating with the trench above," said one wounded man. "It was forty feet below the ground and was fitted up like a hotel room at a good hotel. There were good spring beds, fitted with splendid blankets, three legged drawing-room tables and nicely upholstered chairs. The most fearful night I witnessed was in a wood we captured. You couldn't walk for German dead. They were heaped, one on top of the other and we had to pick our way across, hearing always the moans of the wounded and the dying.

"One of the best stories of the Somme battle is the story of the advance the South Staffs made on all fours—the 'cat charge' we called it. The officer came to us and said: 'Men, we've got to take the trench opposite, and there's some distance to go, but we can do it if we keep our heads, creep along softly, and make no noise.'

Advance Under Moon.
"We got the order to advance about ten o'clock. It was a good night for the business; there was a moon out, but it was low and dimmed by heavy clouds. 'Nip out lads,' said the officer, and we crept along on all fours, not daring so much as to breathe. Our chief difficulty was to avoid falling into shell holes and stumbling over dead bodies and wounded, but nothing went amiss with the 'cat brigade' until we got within thirty or forty yards of the trench.

"Then they spotted us and let fly for all they were worth with machine guns. There was nothing up but to spring up and make a run for it. By heavens, you never saw such a leap in your life as the boys jumped into those trenches. In seconds, not minutes, it was all over. The 'cat brigade' had attained its objective.

"A fine-looking German lay dead in a dug-out. He was an artist, and his paintings hung on the wall of the dug-out. Pictures of scenery and of beautiful women. I wondered what he thought of the war. He was the only German I felt sorry for, and very peaceful he looked with his pictures around him.

"Another German we found dead had just been winding up his watch when he was killed. He still clutched it in his hands. It was a cheap sort of thing, silver, worth perhaps three half-crowns. He valued it, for he had got his name inscribed inside, and he had an outer case lined with velvet for it. Perhaps his sweetheart gave it to him, for there was a photograph of a homely-looking girl among his papers.

Zeppelin Mysteries.
The season of "frightfulness" has set in again, but the people of these isles are not alarmed. In the House of Commons, when questioned, Major Biri said that "surprising things were in store for Germany, which it would be unwise to announce before hand." So we must wait and see.

The same evening, in the lobby of the Commons, the most wonderful stories were afloat. One heard, for example, that there is some wonderful invention by which Zeppelins can be steered from the ground in their own despite. Hence they were led to countries vast and deserts idle, and got no chance of dropping their bombs on inhabited places. But why not steer them seaward again, and make them quite impotent? That was the natural criticism of this new Arabian Nights miracle.

More feasible was the story that by some electrical device the compass by which the Zeppelin is steered is put out of action.
Perhaps the explanation of the blank attack is a wholesome fear of our new anti-aircraft guns. Whenever they were met by fire, the Zeppelins prudently diverted their course.

TWO NEW CITIZENS.

Eyvind Bergdahl, a native of Norway and Ole L. T. Iversen, also a native of Norway, were examined in the District Court this afternoon and were both admitted to full citizenship. They were administered the oath of allegiance to the government of the United States.

JUNEAU MAN'S INVENTION TO GO ON MARKET

Financial Backing Has Been Secured, It Is Said for Kingsbury Electrograph Co.

CHICAGO MEN IN DEAL

Dissatisfied Holders of Stock May Now Sell at Par if They so Desire.

Word has been received in Juneau from the promoters of the Kingsbury Electrograph Company that they have closed a deal which will insure the manufacture and placing of their big advertising signs on the market in a way to put the affairs of the company on a firm financial basis. Chicago capital has become interested in the company, according to the information, and it is planned to put the signs on all the theatres and movie houses in that big city. The word received here came in the form of a personal letter from George Lovegrove to one of the Juneau stockholders and a close personal friend and says in part:

Sign Is Adapted.
"Kingsbury has developed an adaptation of the sign for theatres, moving picture houses, etc. which works automatically and shows any desired number of changes without the use of the typewriter. This will in no way interfere with the advertising plans; but is an addition that opens another source of revenue for the company. He has also perfected a new device for exhibiting the illustrated advertisements which will cut the cost of the sign to about a fourth of what we figured in the first estimate.

"This will make it possible to go ahead on the original capitalization of $250,000. The only thing the Chicago people insist on is that the charter of the company be changed from Alaska to Illinois. They are justified in making this demand as they are putting up the bulk of the money and are entitled to adequate representation on the board of directors. This is impossible under the laws of Alaska which provide that the majority of the board of directors shall be residents of Alaska. It will be beneficial to the Alaskan stockholders as it means that the affairs of the company will be under the direction of competent business men.

Police Officer Interested.
"Kingsbury and I are surrendering twenty per cent of our personal stock in order to meet the demands of the capitalists we have interested without affecting the interests of our other stockholders.

"One person alone is worth all it has cost us to get him interested. He is S. Mayer, secretary of police for the city of Chicago, a position he has held for the past seventeen years. When it comes to getting locations for signs in a city like Chicago political influence is almost a necessity. The new automatic sign is the only one on the market that can be read at an acute angle.

Ready for Action
"The advantage of this may be seen when I state that in Chicago there is an ordinance prohibiting signs from projecting over the sidewalk. They have been getting around somehow but after our signs get on the market the ordinance will be enforced. Our sign can be read from both sides of the street, which gives us a great advantage. However, the sign is good enough to displace others without pressure, and every theatre man here who has seen one has placed an order.

"We have been a long time getting started but are now ready; but if any of the Juneau stockholders have become dissatisfied, if they send the stock to us here we will take it up at par."

The Kingsbury Electrograph was invented by a Juneau man and is a sign arranged with a series of shutters in front of an electric light bulb. The sign is worked with a typewriter and reproduces the letters as fast as they are hit on the typewriter. The letters remain in view until a switch is thrown, which cuts the current. The sign is then ready to have the next message ticked off on the typewriter, which reproduces it on the sign.

BORDEN AND LANE TO TRY ARCTIC AGAIN

Wrecked Mariners Are Undaunted by Their Experience; Build a New Ship.

NOME, Sept. 11.—Vanquished by the elements in a picturesque Arctic venture, but determined to try his luck again next year, John Borden, Chicago sportsman and partner of Capt. Louis Lane, of Seattle, in the Great Bear Expedition, is on his way back to Seattle, undaunted by his tough experiences this year. He sailed for Seattle yesterday on the Pacific Coast Company's liner Umattilla. With him is N. H. Bokum, a member of the expedition.

The steamer Great Bear was wrecked in a terrific storm on August 10 while enroute from Seattle to the Arctic. She struck a pinnacle rock near St. Matthew's Island, whence they were rescued by the coast guard steamer McCulloch.

Before leaving for Seattle Borden announced that the partnership between himself and Lane had been dissolved and that he had taken over all the expedition's assets and liabilities. He said that he had plans to set out with Lane next year in a new ship. Borden will stop a few days in Seattle and then proceed to his home in Chicago, where he will spend the winter. He will return to Seattle in the Spring.

Before boarding the Umattilla, Borden called on Capt. Thomas Ross, of the coast guard cutter McCulloch, to express his appreciation of the promptness with which Ross went to the rescue of the Great Bear survivors. The rescue was carried out with great skill.

During his stay here Borden became popular with the entire camp. He presented the Kennel Club with handsome trophy cups, to be contested for in next winter's races. He joined the Arctic Brotherhood, being initiated into the mysteries of the Great White Trail with much ceremony.
