Mrs. Clark who was taken ill in Fairbanks last August, has fully recovered. Gov. and Mrs. Clark arrived in Seattle on September 6, where they remained until the sailing of the Jefferson.

The greater part of the Governor's time has been occupied in official business. He has compiled his annual report and forwarded it to President Taft. In his report Gov. Clark laid particular stress on the needs of transportation to the interior, and

A GREAT BATTLE WITH THE TURKS STILL RAGES

PARIS, Nov. 11.—A dispatch to the Petit Journal from London, says that all the European powers with the exception of Austria, have presented a joint note to the Bulgarian government offering to mediate between Bulgaria and the allies and Turkey, with a view of ending the war.

The dispatch also states that the Bulgarian government had refused to consider mediation until the great battle now raging at Tchatalaja has ended.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Bulgarian attack on Tchatalaja goes on relentlessly. It is reported that Monastir has been captured by the allies, and also that the Servians have taken Dibra, an important town in Albania.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—The Austrian government is making desperate efforts to learn the truth of rumors that the massacre of Christians had begun in Constantinople.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—The European war situation seems to become darker and more complicated each day. The success of the Bulgarians and their allies against their common enemy, Turkey, has caused a condition akin to consternation among the European powers and no one knows what new complications may arise daily.

The danger all along has been the fear of a conflict which may embroil practically the whole of Europe in a general war, the like of which has not been known for a century.

There is much excitement in Vienna and other European capitals over the possibility of a war between Austria and Russia growing out of the situation in the Balkan states. There is no doubt that the condition is critical.

SITUATION NOT HOPELESS.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—"Dangerous, but not hopeless," is the political plight of Europe, as summed up in French official circles.

The efforts being made to effect mediation have been postponed because of the controversy which has arisen between Austria and Servia over Servians having obtained access to the Adriatic.

UNKNOWN MAN FALLS FROM FERRY; DROWNS

An unknown man was drowned from the ferry boat Teddy on the last trip from Douglas last night. There were twenty-eight passengers aboard. The cabin of the boat was filled and the entrance was jammed with passengers trying to get shelter from the wind.

As the boat rolled in the light sea that was running, the man was seen to lurch backward and fall over the rail into the sea.

Claude Snyder, who was standing by the man's side at the time of the accident, hurried to the wheelhouse and told Captain States of the disaster.

The launch was turned quickly and headed for the unfortunate who could be seen struggling and heard calling loudly. Ed McDougan, who was at the wheel, called encouraging words but just before the launch reached him he gave three short shrieks and disappeared. His hat still floated on the surface and an unsuccessful effort was made to get it.

Irvin Warren together with Claude Snyder, sat in the waiting room with the lost man a few minutes before the ferry arrived from Juneau.

When the man came down the alp he stumbled and fell. Getting to his feet he remarked, "the second time today."

The lost man was of Irish descent so Captain States thinks, and had traveled across with him several times. He came here about two months ago from Dawson or some point in the interior. He was medium dark complexioned and under 25; about five feet seven inches tall and weighed perhaps 145 pounds. He wore a dark hat, a gray suit and carried a watch. The first time Captain States saw the man was two months ago when he gave him passage to Douglas where he expected to work in the government road camp. For some time the man has been longshoring. O. E. Head, the longshore boss, was unable to identify the missing man but has his name undoubtedly.
