Americans Lead In the Philanthropies of 1912

The year 1912 was notable for the large number of benefactions for educational and philanthropic purposes. The total benefactions accruing from amounts of $10,000 up, were approximately $302,000,000. It is probable that the sum of the lesser donations would reach about $25,000,000, making $327,000,000 in all. These figures exceed the preceding year by $152,000,000.

Educational works were the most popular channel for the distribution of money; hospitals and the care of the aged came next, with gifts for religious enterprises a close third. Besides the known amounts there were innumerable donations by persons whose identity was not disclosed or disclosed to only a few.

In England during the year 1912 the benefactions aggregated only about $20,000,000.

The American benefactions would more than pay for a year's maintenance of the Army and Navy. The aggregate is more than the capital of the Bank of England or of the Imperial Bank of Germany, and exceeds the amount of money in the Sub-Treasury in New York.

During the past twelve years $1,502,000,000 has been given away in this country—which if distributed to all of the inhabitants of the earth would be 92 cents for each individual, or it would supply $16.33 to each inhabitant of the continental United States.

Pennsylvania Scientist Praises Kenai Peninsula

Dr. A. W. Crane, a scientist of note and a member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, who is in Alaska investigating coal resources of the territory in the interests of outside capitalists, has become greatly interested in the placer gold deposits located on the Kenai river.

Prof. Crane returned to Seward recently and speaks in glowing terms of the country and the panning that he did while out.

Prof. Crane declares that the Kenai river is soon destined to become one of the greatest dredging fields in the world, and expresses his surprise that big capital has not grabbed all of the valuable ground.

"I panned on the river from the upper Kenai river to the lower lake and got gold in every pan that I took and some of the pans showed a mighty fine placer prospect indeed," Prof. Crane said. "There is an abundance of black sand, and I have seldom seen fine gold that separates from the black sand as easily as the deposits on the Kenai river."

"At the head of the river we found coarse gold, but I notice that as we went down the river the gold kept getting finer and finer, although the pans appeared to be of apparently the same value. High up on the hills on the lower river I found in the pan coarse gold that was rough and sharp cornered, showing that it was not long free from the ledge."

"There is every evidence of quartz ledges on the hills back of the lower lake, and I will be greatly surprised if some very valuable mining property is not developed in this section in the near future."

"The greatest drawback to the thorough prospecting of that section of the country is the thick moss that covers everything, making it hard to locate where the owners are working on a four-foot ledge of high grade gold-bearing quartz that would be considered a sensational showing were it anywhere but in Alaska, and up here it is looked on as a very ordinary showing. I think it is very valuable property."

"I also visited the dredging ground that was recently taken over by the German Syndicate of Seattle and was surprised at the uniform richness of the gravel. I think that the Kenai peninsula is the richest mineralized country that I ever visited, and I predict that within the next few years you will have a big, rich, prosperous quartz camp with the Kenai river surprising the dredging end of the mining world."

WHY IS WHOOPING COUGH?
 CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 15. — Frank Burr Mallory, associate professor of pathology at the Harvard Medical School, has definitely proved that the symptoms of whooping cough are caused by the bacillus pertussis, bits and children.

He has experimented on puppies, rabbits, guinea pigs, and other animals. The bacilli form rather sticky colonies, apparently mat the cilia together and interfere with their normal movements. They thus cause a constant irritation, which brings about spasmodic coughing, terminating in a violent intake of air, which is the whoop.

Dr. J. A. Honeij, another Harvard man, is studying leprosy at Penikese Island, where guinea pigs, horses, cows and other animals are used for his experiments.
