Douglas Fire
 Anniversary Tomorrow

DOUGLAS, March 8.—At 6 p. m., March 9, 1911, on a cold and dreary day, occurred the biggest fire in the history of Douglas Island. It swept a part of Front street, burning many business houses to the ground and costing the business men many thousands of dollars. As the people were eating supper the fire-alarm suddenly changed its warning. The fire had started at a restaurant which stood where the Republic Bar now stands; the fire then spread to the Douglas hotel and swept the whole place on either side for some distance.

The fire tested the mettle of Douglas business men, who have built up again and built much nicer places than those destroyed. It also exemplified the good of having a bunch of fine firemen such as Douglas possesses.

Douglas Fans Will

Everybody interested in the national game is invited to attend.
