FAITHFUL TREADWELL DOG IS NO MORE
DOUGLAS, Jan. 20.—"Rover," the faithful old dog that belonged to the Christie family for many years and made friends for himself of all the residents of Douglas island, is no more. The poor old fellow was afflicted with a growth on his neck, and to put him out of his misery and prevent anything from happening that might mar the memory of the animal, he was put to death. "Rover" was only a dog, but he was known and liked of all. Many a passerby, attracted by his unfailing kindness, stopped to pet him before proceeding on their way. He possessed many traits that stamped him to be almost human in intelligence. For instance, when anyone would call at the Christie home, if the knock was not promptly responded to, old "Rover" would scurry around until he found a member of the family whom he would bring to the visitor to bid him welcome. This was one of many things that served to make everybody the friend of the old dog that is dead.
