WELL KNOWN DOUGLAS COUPLE ARE WED.

Mrs. Josie Corbett and Mr. William Kilburn, both of whom are residents of long standing in Douglas, were quietly married in apartments at the Hotel Cain last night. There were no guests present except the witnesses, Mrs. H. F. Cain and Mr. George Burford, an intimate friend of the groom. They will continue to make their home in Douglas.

The bride has lived in Douglas for several years and is quite popular in social circles on account of many endearing qualities. The groom has lived in Douglas for many years and has of late been wharfing for the Douglas city dock. He first came to Juneau in 1898, and is one of the fourteen survivors of the Fenlon expedition that attempted to cross Alaska glacier during the rush to Dawson. Out of a party of 40 all perished except fourteen. Mr. Kilburn has continued to live in Juneau and Douglas since his arrival here.

COLONEL'S "NATURE FAKIR" LIKES YAKS

Ernest Thompson Seton—who was Ernest Seton Thompson until he discovered that he liked his mother's people better than he like his father's—and whom The Colonel once upon a time designated a "nature fakir," thinks yaks, for the introduction of which into Alaska Representative William L. LaFollette, of Washington, recently introduced a bill in Congress, appropriating $100,000, would become a valuable asset in this country. In this conclusion a University of Washington natural history professor agrees. The yak is the cold weather live stock of the high altitude and cold zones of Central Asia, and it is believed by Seton that they, or a cross between them and some one of the American domestic breeds of cattle, would prove just the thing to furnish food for the colder sections of Alaska.

 Douglas—Bennett, Snow, Thelleike, Mentzner and Terry.
 Seven Elks' lodges are represented in the teams, four in the Douglas team and three in Juneau's team.

FIRE DESTROYS CABIN.

Fire destroyed a cabin belonging to James Hogan and situated on the side-hill near the beach and between the court house and Hogan's flats, at 9:30 this morning. A prompt response by the fire department prevented further spread of the flames and the blaze was soon under control, but the flimsy nature of the structure and the headway gained before the alarm was turned in, made it impossible to save the building. It was occupied by a man employed aboard the steamer Georgia and another man. It is presumed that an over-heated stove was responsible for the loss.

Credit Due Jack Dalton.

Too much credit cannot be given Jack Dalton, of Cordova, for the stand he has taken in the mining of the Matanuska coal for a naval test. He refuses to allow the expedition to be "jobbed" by apparently interested and overly officious undertrappers in the employ of the government and if there is attempted a repetition of the farce that resulted in the Bering river fields, its accomplishment will only be secured after a personal encounter with our townsman and the public fully advised of the double-cross given Alaska's fuel.—Cordova Alaskan.

Swedish mining man, experienced in all kinds of work, wishes any kind of job quick; best references as to handling of large crews of men, etc. Add K., Daily Empire. 1-22-31.
