LET'S KNOW MORE ABOUT THIS.

IN view of President Wilson's past policy toward Alaska and his expressed future policy, as well as that of the Secretary of the Interior...

Isn't it asking overmuch to expect people to take for granted the statement that the administration in formulating its Alaskan policies was "guided by the experience, knowledge and advice of Mr. Wickersham?"

What part of the program was it that Mr. Wickersham planned?

Did he inspire the President's declaration that "the people of Alaska should be given a full Territorial form of government?"

Did Secretary of the Interior Lane get his Alaska Development Board idea from the Delegate from Alaska?

Was it Mr. Wickersham that persuaded the President and Secretary of the Interior to urge the construction of the government railroad in Alaska?

Was it at the invitation of the Delegate that the Secretary of the Treasury wrote to Mr. Wickersham, nearly a year after the passage of the memorial by the Alaska Legislature asking for an additional appropriation for a capitol building...

Was it at the suggestion of the Delegate to Congress that Secretary of the Interior Lane urged the passage of a bill restoring to entry the 80-rod reservations between waterfront land claims?

Let us hear more about these matters. The voters no doubt would be pleased to know just how much of the administration's Alaskan policy bears the blaze marks of the guide?

Let's get down to brass tacks when discussing these things.

The Northwestern Baseball League should now be run as a baseball league ought to be run. As sporting editor of the Times "Shorty" Hughes has been instructing the managers of leagues and baseball teams on all points of the game for a long time...

GERMANY'S DAY OF LIQUIDATION.

THE present is likely to be Germany's day of liquidation of international controversies—unless, of course, she should win a quick victory in Europe. Every little country that has been nursing a grudge against the Kaiser is now getting it out and brushing it up in preparation for presentation to the court of public opinion...

ONE WICKERSHAM PAPER IS FAIR.

THE Iditarod Pioneer thinks Delegate Wickersham does not favor a Territorial form of government in Alaska because he did not include it in his platform. It supports him because, among other things, it agrees with him. It is opposed to a full Territorial form of government. That is fair.

COMMANDERS IN EUROPEAN WAR

Gen. Sir John D. P. French. Sir John Denton Pinkstone French, Chief of Staff of the Army of Great Britain has won the distinction of office which he now enjoys by a series of achievements which make an enviable record...

Gen. Sukhomlinoff, Russia's Minister of War, unlike most of his predecessors in the War department, is a Slav and a Russian Nationalist. He was at one time the military governor of Kiev. Until called to begin the task of reorganization of the Russian army as Minister of War, his entire attention was given to the strategic problems of the western frontiers of Russia...

Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the general staff of the German army is a nephew of the great Field-marshal von Moltke, and "rejoices in the Christian name of Julius." Paralleling his uncle's wide reputation for taciturnity the nephew and successor as Chief of Staff is famed for never smiling. Not merely deep gloom, but actually profound misery is his habitual expression...

Gen. Joseph Joffre. General Joseph Joffre, commander in chief of the army of France, is perhaps one of the most popular men in his country today. He is frequently called "Iron-willed Joffre," and among the army men it is a common saying that if General Joffre has once made up his mind nothing can force him to change it. He is a small man, as was that other commander in chief of France's army in the fearful hour of the French revolution, sixty-two years of age, with an unusually massive head, fair haired, and wears a heavy drooping moustache...
