

What do you Buy When you Buy a Typewriter?

You pay for neat, well-written correspondence, for perfect carbon copies, for the quality and quantity of work your typist can turn out—in short, for the years of service you get.

If your inventory were made on this basis, you would find in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter a much bigger asset than the price you paid for it and a much bigger asset than in any other writing machine ever made.

Ball Bearing; Long Wearing

It isn't the machine—it's what the machine will do for you.

THE BURNING OF ANCIENT LOUVAIN

(By Richard Harding Davis in the Boston Globe.)

For two hours on Thursday night I was in what 600 years had been the city of Louvain. The Germans were burning it, and to hide their work kept us locked in the rail road carriages. But the story was written against the sky, was told to us by German soldier incoherent with excesses; and we could read it in the faces of women and children being led to concentration camps and of citizens on their way to be shot.

The Germans sentenced Louvain on Wednesday to become a wilderness, and with the German system and love of thoroughness they left Louvain an empty blackened shell. The reason for this appeal to the torch and the execution of non-combatants, as given to me on Thursday morning by General Von Lutwitz, military governor of Brussels, was this: On Wednesday while the German military commander of the troops in Louvain was at the Hotel de Ville talking to the burgomaster a son of the burgomaster with an automatic pistol shot the chief of staff and German staff surgeons.

Uutwitz claims this was the signal for the civil guard in civilian clothes on roofs, to fire upon the German soldiers in the open square below. He said the Belgians had quick-firing guns brought from Antwerp. As for a week the Germans had occupied Louvain and closely guarded all approaches, the story that there was any gunning is absurd.

Fifty Germans were killed and wounded. For that, said Lutwitz, Louvain must be wiped out. So in pantomime with his fist he swept the papers across the table. "The Hotel de Ville," he added, "was a beautiful building; it is a pity it must be destroyed."

Money cannot ever restore Louvain. And its people's handiwork belonged to the world. With torch and dynamite the Germans have turned their masterpieces into ashes and all the Kaiser's horses and all his men cannot bring them back again.

We were not allowed to speak to any citizen of Louvain, but the Germans crowded the windows, boastful gloating, eager to interpret. We were free to move from one of the train to the other and for the two hours during which it circled the burning city was before us in its most hateful aspect.

Of 50 English prisoners all were erect and soldierly. In the ocean of gray the little patch of khaki-clad men who had outnumbered but not defeated them with calm but uncurious eyes. In one way I was glad to see them there. Later they will bear witness as to how the enemy make a wilderness and call it war.

Outside the station in the public square the people of Louvain passed in unending procession, women bare-headed and weeping and men carrying the children asleep on their shoulders. All were hemmed in by a shadowy army of gray wolves.

You felt it was only a nightmare, cruel and unrelieved. And then you remembered that the German Emperor has told us what it is. It is, his holy war.

"THE DAY OF DAYS" SATISFIES BIG AUDIENCE

"The Day of Days" with Cyril Scott featured in the cast was presented to a large house in Juneau theater last night for the first time. It was received with satisfaction and is a pronounced success—one of the most gripping stories ever told with a camera. It takes five reels to produce the great silent drama but there is not a dull or uninteresting moment during the entire presentation. Mr. Heppburn feels so well satisfied with it that he has billed the play for four successive nights. It will be shown tonight, tomorrow night and again Sunday night. A large crowd of out-of-town people are expected for the latter nights of the season.

"ATOP OF THE WORLD" DRAWS BIG IN SEATTLE

According to Seattle papers B. B. Dobbs' Alaska life in motion pictures entitled "Atop of the World in Motion" is making a great hit in one of the higher class moving picture play houses of Seattle. It was billed for six nights at the Alaska theatre. The revised work contains new scenes in Alaska as late as last spring.

INTERMEYER TELLS WHY STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Samuel Untermyer, the New York lawyer, says if the New York Stock Exchange had been operated under government supervision and the sale of stocks "short" prohibited, it would not have been necessary for it to close. He says gambling in stocks rather than buying and selling made it necessary to close.

SEATTLE HAS DRY YEAR; AUGUST BREAKS RECORDS

SEATTLE, Sept. 11.—August of this year had the lightest rain fall of any for that month since the establishment of the weather bureau in 1890. The precipitation was .01 of an inch for the entire month. The total rainfall from Sept. 1, 1913 to Sept. 1, 1914 was 39.69 inches. The normal annual rainfall is 36.59.

TRIBUTE TO FRENCH.

As a newspaper striving, under difficulties of censorship and expense which few outside of journalism appreciate, to print authentic news, The World must express its gratitude to the French War Office. ## BAD WEATHER IN ARCTIC OCEAN

NOME, Sept. 1.—The United States revenue cutter Bear, which arrived here last night from Wrangell island after an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the 22 castaways from the Stefansson ship Karluk, who have been on the island since March 10 last, reports encountering terrible weather off the island, and was obliged to turn back owing to lack of coal.

Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, late master of the Karluk, who is on the Bear, is greatly worried about the Karluk refugees, who had supplies to last them only until August 10. Even if they have eaten their dogs they must be near the point of privation. The Bear is taking on coal and as soon as this work is completed she will turn back to the Arctic to rescue the prisoners. Nothing has been heard from the Russian ice-breaking steamer Talmyr since she entered the Arctic to take off the Karluk party, and there is a hope that she may have succeeded, for she is well equipped for the task.

Snow Deep on Decks.

The Bear, after leaving Nome, July 24, went to Point Barrow, the northern extremity of Alaska, to deliver the United States mail. She then proceeded west, between Wrangell and Herald islands. About fifteen miles from Wrangell she found her way blocked by mountainous ice. She cruised about three or four days, seeking an opening in the ice. During this time a terrible gale arose, with heavy snowfall. The Bear's rigging was thickly incased in ice, the decks piled high with snow and the wireless aerial broken down by the burden of ice.

Brings Elvira's Survivors. On the Bear were several sailors from the whaler Elvira, which was crushed in the ice near Demarkation point last fall. A heavy southeastern gale is blowing here, and the Bear can not go out until it abates.

LONDON BUYERS TAKING AMERICAN SECURITIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The New York Herald says the demand for American securities grows in London and that business has shown improvement during the past week, but that brokers are still cautious.

French Think of Indorsements.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—Business being done on the Bourse is nil. The liquidation of open accounts has been postponed until Sept. 30, but the question of postponing again settlement of carry-over loans is still undecided. Considerable interest is being kindled in American investments, and it is believed that large French buying orders would be sent over to market were Wall Street to reopen confidently.

POLES QUIT GERMAN FOR RUSSIAN SERVICE

LONDON, Sept. 11.—According to the Times' Petrograd correspondent, Russia's appeal to the Poles to renege against the Teutonic foe has had extraordinary effect among Slav soldiers in the German service. Information in Petrograd indicates that Polish soldiers belonging to the 5th Breslau Army Corps, of Germany, serving on western frontier, mutinied and killed their officers.

Slav Regiments in the Austrian Service are also declared notoriously disaffected.

Novoe Mremya sates that one whole Austrian regiment went over to the Russian side.

The Admiral Schley made the passage from New York in 19 days sailing time.

GREAT BRITAIN IN PREVIOUS WARS

(Prince Rupert Empire.) Canada's proposed contribution of 25,000 men may look small, but judged by the records of history it is a considerable force.

In the battle of Waterloo, the British troops engaged numbered less than 25,000, the rest of the army being composed of allies. It is a strange and significant fact that never in the whole previous course of her existence has the United Kingdom put 50,000 of her own children in line upon any battlefield, and rarely ever so many as 30,000.

At the Peace of Utrecht in 1713, when the world was as truly an armed camp as it is today, the standing army of England numbered only 23,000 men. In Walpole's day it declined to 18,000. Canada's proposed contribution compares favorably with the contingent sent by England to fight the famous war of the Austrian succession. This contingent numbered only 16,000 men. It was subsequently increased to 25,000, which left for the defence of England's shores a garrison of only 15,000 recruits. So that when in 1745 Prince Charles Edward landed on the island there were only some 3,000 men in red coats to oppose him.

Even at the close of the Seven Years' War when Great Britain found herself in control of all America and a great portion of the rest of the world she had a military establishment of only 45,000 men. In the dark days following the American Revolution the garrison by discharges and otherwise was reduced to a force of not less than 7,000 men. There was no noticeable increase in this number till during the Napoleonic wars, when the very existence of England was threatened. Then a regular army of 40,000 men was raised and with such Wellington began and carried through his Peninsular campaign, which is one of the most brilliant in history.

ALASKA WOMAN TELLS A GOOD GAME STORY

Mrs. Tola Wyman, who operates a large quartz mine on Prince of Wales island, in Southeastern Alaska, who is making a stay at the Frye, tells an interesting story of an experience she had on the first of June. She went out one morning, when the sky had cleared after a long period of rainy weather, taking with her her small black and tan dog. Walking along the beach, looking for indications of quartz, she came upon a promising ledge. "I climbed up the slippery rock and suddenly came on a crovasse, where I saw, scarcely 25 feet away, the scarcely dead body of a deer, surrounded by a pack of gray wolves. I picked up the dog and started back to camp, calling at the top of my lungs. My calls were without result, as I was so far from camp. The wolves followed for a short distance, and then went back to their kill, without offering to molest us. "I told some of the men at camp what I had seen, and they set off on the beach in a boat. The wolves took fright and ran before they could take a shot at them, but we had the satisfaction of finding the deer scarcely touched. So we had some fine deer steaks which we couldn't otherwise have obtained, as it was out of season for shooting deer."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.
