BATTLE AT DECISIVE POINT

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Amiens correspondent of the Times says heavy fighting is in progress this afternoon southeast of Amiens. He says that it is the beginning of the decisive phase of the Battle of Aisne. "On the issue of this fighting," he says, "depends the question of the continued occupation of French soil by the German invaders, or their retreat to strongly entrenched positions which have been prepared for them on the Sambre river in Belgium. "The enemy occupied Douai yesterday morning and seized the railway station at Souain on the line connecting Douai with Valenciennes. It appears, therefore, that the Germans are alive to the necessity of protecting their line of communication to Mons, where the headquarters of the field army have been established. "Thus the German line has been extended north from Cambrai, which has been occupied in force. "We learned today that a big battle had begun and it was rumored that the Germans had advanced as far as 'Mantidier.'"

ALLIES PREPARE TO DESCEND ON RIGHT

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The situation at the battle of Aisne last night may be summarized by saying that the Allies had completed plans to descend with terrific force on the German right, which was already bending backward under the persistent pressure that had been making headway slowly but surely for four days to the Northward of the River Aisne.

ALLIES TRY TO BREAK GERMAN RAIL CONTROL

PARIS, Sept. 23.—The attack directed by the Allies against Gen. von Buelow's portion of the German line, which was weakening for the purpose of aiding Gen. von Kluck's hard pressed position, has been for the double purpose of forcing a break in the enemy's long front and to strike at his control of the railroad from Laon to Rethel.

NINE MILES OF DEAD IN TRENCHES

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Daily Mail's correspondent says wounded arriving at an unnamed place in France from the front report that there are nine miles of dead in the trenches between the towns of Peronne and St. Quentin.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Daily Mail's correspondent reports that the German right has been turned between Peronne and St. Quentin.

BEGINNING OF END.

Paris, Sept. 23.—An official statement made this afternoon says the Allies have materially advanced the western wing of their army today, and that a German attack on the eastern wing of the French lines has been checked. "This is believed to be the beginning of the end of the Battle of Aisne."

ATTACK ON ST. BAUSSANT.

Paris, Sept. 23.—When the German right flank was thrown back on the right bank of the Oise river, an attack was ordered on St. Baussant.

GERMANS COME BACK FROM LORRAINE.

Washington, Sept. 23.—A cable to the French embassy says the German left wing in Lorraine had again crossed the French border and that it had reoccupied Demeore, north of Nancy.

DESCRIPTION OF FLANK MOVEMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The London Mail's correspondent wiring of the movement of the Allies which resulted in the turning of the German right wing says:

"Peronne was evacuated by the Germans four days ago. The Germans occupied a strong position with hills behind and marshes in front. The Allies received orders to take the position at all costs. The reason for the order being given was that if the Germans were driven from here they would be enveloped by the outspreading French left wing. At first the trenches were combed out by a hot artillery fire but the Germans still hung on and the German guns on the heights behind were doing execution among the French soldiers.

"It was then decided to storm the position across the marshes in half light immediately before dawn. The French advanced in a number of narrow columns and suffered badly but they never wavered.

"The Germans waited for them in the trenches and there followed a fierce struggle—a breast to breast fight. The French had the advantage of dash and vigor and they stabbed and stabbed until their arms ached. Their losses were heavy but they gained their point and the Germans fell back to St. Quentin.

"The French were reinforced and pursued the Germans hotly into the suburbs of the town. There was savage fighting in the streets but yard by yard they were driven back until they received orders to abandon the town. I hear that they are now making an effort to retake Peronne."

GOVERNMENT SEEKING OFFENDING WIRELESS

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 23.—The United States government is investigating a report that a wireless station in inaccessible mountains either of Oregon or California are communicating regularly with German warships off the coast in violation of the neutrality of the United States.
