MIXES PERSONALITIES AND POLITICS

That Delegate James Wickersham has invariably personal interest and politics and turned on those who have opposed him in any manner and for the reason that they did oppose him has been proved over and over again. Even his war on the Guggenheim people began with their refusal to employ him as an attorney at his terms and their support of an opponent in his first race for Delegate to Congress. Wickersham Was Intimate with Guggenheims.

On April 8, 1908, only a few weeks before announcing his candidacy for Delegate to Congress, Judge Wickersham was on terms of intimacy with the Guggenheim officials in Alaska and elsewhere. On that date he wrote a letter to Stephen Birch, head of the Alaska Syndicate, the Guggenheim Alaska company at Seattle, in response to one received from Mr. Birch suggesting that he, Wickersham, should become an attorney for the syndicate. He offered to become their head attorney at a salary of $15,000 a year. There was nothing discreditable about that, but the letter indicated friendliness.

Letter Was Friendly. In that letter, Judge Wickersham said: "I regret that I cannot meet you in Seattle the latter part of this month, because one can make one's ideas plainer in conversation than by writing, but since the opening of the April term of courts prevents it, I shall briefly state the matter by letter. I have entered upon the practice of law here, and represent some of the most important interests in the Territory, and the outlook for returns is satisfactory, still I long for the fleshpots of the 'outside,' and would accept an offer from your allied Alaska interests to act in any subordinate capacity. I will accept a three years contract at $15,000 per annum with offices in Seattle and office force and maintenance. Upon that sort of an arrangement I would devote my time exclusively to their interests, and give them the best service possible. My opportunities here, however, are so good that I could not afford to give them up for less than a three-years' contract with you. Please advise me by wire if anything is done in connection with this offer and it may be thus arranged.

"Remember me to Captain Jarvis." Notified Jarvis and Sought Birch. The position of chief attorney, being one that already was filled, Judge Wickersham did not get the position that he said he would take. A few weeks later he decided to run for Delegate to Congress, and forthwith he telegraphed to Capt. D. H. Jarvis, high official of the Guggenheim companies at Seattle saying: "I have decided to run for Delegate to Congress. Where is Birch?" At this time Capt. Jarvis, to whom the Delegate had sent his personal regards shortly before, and Stephen Birch were the head officials of the Guggenheim Alaska companies, and whatever else the telegram might mean, at least it did not indicate that his candidacy was inimical to their desires.

Jarvis Supports Corson. However, soon after the inauguration of the campaign for Delegate to Congress in 1908, it became known that Capt. Jarvis was supporting John W. Corson, the regular Republican nominee for Delegate. It was then that Delegate Wickersham for the first time attacked the Guggenheims for their participation in Alaska politics, and business methods, and as a dangerous monopoly.

Fight Was Good One. That this fight was one that should have been made, and was one that resulted good to Alaskans, may very well be admitted, but the point is that it, in all probability, would not have been made had Capt. Jarvis and Stephen Birch responded to the apparent approach that was made by Judge Wickersham, and rendered the same kind of support to him that they tried to render to Corson.

MISS GETCHEL GIVES HALLOWEEN PARTY. Miss Francis Getchel entertained the pupils of her grade of the public school last night at the home of Miss Dorothy Cramer, 501 Kennedy street. Games were played until after ten o'clock. The young folks had a delightful evening.

ARRIVALS ON WATSON. The Admiral Watson, arriving from the westward last evening, brought the following passengers for Juneau: L. E. Ellingswood, F. Sinclair, J. S. Webster, Miss Esther Gibson, M. G. McDonald, F. W. Bousley, J. H. Morrison, and ten second class.

FAVORED RAILROAD AND HOME RULE

In his speech at Valdez, attacking Col. W. P. Richardson, Delegate Wickersham said that he had opposed a railroad for Alaska and that he had opposed Territorial government for the Territory.

The Valdez Miner of October 25 prints copies of letters in which Col. Richardson, then Major Richardson, writing to the Secretary of War, urged government aid to railroads in Alaska as long ago as January 24, 1906; that he urged a government railroad January 30, 1908, and that he supported the railroad bill that was passed last spring.

Why a Government Railroad. In his letter of January 30, 1908, to Secretary of War Taft, in support of a government railroad for Alaska, Major Richardson said: "Not only am I convinced of the futility of dependence upon private enterprise and capital to accomplish what is needed for Alaska's development, but every day emphasizes to my mind the necessity for making more readily available at an early date the resources of that region, and more particularly its extensive coal deposits, with the establishment of suitable coaling station and with improved communication by land, to the end that the Territory may become what, by its geographical position, it is entitled to be, a valuable strategic base, in case of necessity for operations in the Far East."

The Valdez Miner continues its story of Col. Richardson's support of Territorial government for Alaska and his opposition to the commission form of government, saying: "In September, 1909, President Taft made his Seattle speech in which he foreshadowed the Beveridge plan for a commission government for Alaska. Before leaving Alaska that fall Col. Richardson wrote and mailed a memorandum to the President (October 26) respectfully suggesting that the commission project would be very welcome in Alaska. In this memorandum he stated that bitter antagonism to home rule by officials and politicians in Alaska had driven nearly everybody else to favor it. The letter proceeds:

States Strong Objections. "For three or four years this outspoken opposition to the mere idea has been the cause of continual turmoil in the Territory, and has been the principal factor in giving strength and cohesion to the extreme element in its favor. A free admission of the principle, with assurance of favorable action as soon as the developments and evidence of stable communities shall seem to justify, will go far to allay the agitation and turn the thoughts of the people into other channels.

People Splendidly Qualified. "In respect to the natural qualifications for self-government no citizens of our country are better equipped as a whole than those in Alaska. The majority are intelligent, self-reliant, full of the spirit of independence, and we have never had a more law-abiding frontier." "The memorandum closed with a paragraph urging the government aid to railroad construction in Alaska. "When he went to Washington a little later Col. Richardson quietly stated his objections to the commission project, wherever he could legitimately. He discussed the matter with Judge Wickersham, telling him that the bill would be a mistake. At that time the two had been personal friends for years. Suddenly the Delegate came out with the charge that Col. Richardson was urging the bill. The charge was in brazen defiance of truth and Wickersham knew it, but evidently thought he could make capital for himself by fighting Richardson."

A GENERAL SUBJECT

Our Autumn and Winter offerings in haberdashery are now completely mobilized, and full lines of cravats, shirts, hose and underwear are at the front. It is difficult to generalize on the good points of these smart clothes; they were all selected for men who exercise keen discrimination in the matter of dress. Why not place your order now for the things you'll need this winter. Prices have not advanced, but that may not apply to the future.

A CHARACTERFUL DERBY

Every face requires a certain style of derby to conform to it. An inexperienced salesman may hand you twenty different patterns before you find the one which looks right. Such aimless trying on of hats is indeed trying. In our store every salesman knows the style you'll like and quickly select it. Our winter models are particularly smart this year. If the idea of a new hat is in your head, come in and let us fit one properly on it.

Boys' Two-Trouser Suits

These are in the newest Norfolk styles in ages 6 to 17, shown in all wool fancy tweeds and cheviots, in gray, brown and the new Tartan patterns. Will stand the rough usages and makes an excellent suit for Sunday or school wear. Our prices please.

BUNNELL'S CHANCES GROW BRIGHTER

As election day draws nearer the prospect for the success of the Democratic ticket grows brighter. All the clurs that have been cast at C. E. Bunnell, the Democratic candidate for Delegate to Congress, all attempts to belittle his abilities; the efforts to prove him a Republican, have fallen flat, and have but re-acted against those who have sought by those means to deprive him of the support of the people of the Territory. Wherever Mr. Bunnell has appeared he has made friends, so many that his election is practically assured. From the Second division comes the report that he will carry that division by a good plurality. The Fourth division, which has been the stronghold of Delegate Wickersham, is rapidly changing, and while it may give Mr. Wickersham a plurality, it will be a small one. In the Third, our own division, which gave Mr. Wickersham a plurality of 211 votes over Gilmore two years ago, there will be a plurality greater this year in favor of Mr. Bunnell. The First division was carried by Mr. Wickersham two years ago, but so great has been the change of sentiment since then in that section; so many new voters have been made there that have expressed their preference for Mr. Bunnell, that it is practically assured that he will carry the division by a good plurality. By electing Mr. Bunnell the people of Alaska will demonstrate to President Wilson that they keenly appreciate his efforts to open up the territory to development, and his interest in the welfare of those who have made the Territory their home. No better man could have been selected to represent the people of Alaska in the halls of Congress. He is free from all entangling alliances which might curtail his usefulness. He will go to Washington as a representative of the plain people of the Territory, and he will work, and if necessary fight, for what is for the best interests of the people here. It is the height of absurdity to say that Mr. Bunnell, a member of the dominant party, will be unable to get more and get it easier than a man of no party. Any man with the slightest experience in practical politics knows this to be true, and the statements of Delegate Wickersham to the contrary notwithstanding, fighting is not the only means of getting that which one desires, but is usually the last resort, and as a rule is not conducive to extremely friendly feelings on the part of the combatants, nor does it lead to easier methods of obtaining future favors.
