TANANA RUSH BEGINS OVER WHITE PASS

The shipment of merchandise from the marts of trade in the states over the wide Alaskan snow fields and long stretches of Yukon ice to the yawning markets of the golden Tanana has begun. The first Fairbanks-bound outfit came, of course, to Skagway and will take the only practicable route to the new Mecca of the mining world. It arrived on the Ramona and will leave over the W. P. & Y. R. for Whitehorse on its long overland journey tomorrow morning. As usual, Charles C. Runner, of Skagway, Nome and Fairbanks, leads the advance.

The overland trip from Whitehorse to Fairbanks has no terrors for Mr. Runner. He has made it before and knows what he is doing. He says many articles of merchandise can be transported to Fairbanks and sold at a profit.

Mr. Runner's shipment consists of 100,000 cigars and other articles for which his educated judgment has told him there is a demand in the interior. He will take it in sleds from Whitehorse. He has six horses and six men to do the work, and he is looking for another team.

Mr. Runner, speaking from much experience secured on the Alaskan trails, says there is only one practicable route from the outside to Fairbanks and that one is the Skagway route. That he chose it over which to take his own goods after having tried it once before indicates that he does not speak unadvisedly.

Mr. Runner says there is a great deal of Tanana talk wherever he has been on the coast and the large cities of the west, and that people are beginning to realize that there is but one way to reach the fields in safety and comfort, and that is by the White Pass.

An application has been made to the supreme court of the United States at Washington for an order restraining him from occupying his seat. Senator Platt refuses to pay any attention to the charges.
