200,000 EXPERTS TRAINED BY RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. — The American Red Cross has developed and trained nearly two hundred thousand first aid experts in the last six months it was learned today.

They are all men, and all available for war service if needed. The course of instruction, which is in the hands of seven thousand Red Cross physicians and surgeons throughout the country, also is open to women.

Nearly a hundred thousand railroad men, half as many lumbermen and as many quarrymen have received instruction in "first aid" this year.

This work covers the stoppage of hemorrhages, resuscitating following drowning or gas asphyxiation, the carrying of injured persons and many other phases of first aid, especially in the hazardous industries.

The course covers ten lectures, supplemented by the requisite practical work at the conclusion of which certificates are issued to those completing the course satisfactorily.

The Red Cross has two "first aid" cars for the instruction of railroad men, one of which has just finished a tour of three months giving instruction to the railroad men.

Through these courses the first aid division of the Red Cross corps is building up a reserve of trained men available not only for Red Cross war service, but also for sanitary training detachments to provide a sanitary reserve for the army and navy.

TO THE CORDOVA SAMMIES.

It isn't easy, this doing our bit, to don't make so much fuss of our learning to knit. 'Twixt slipping and ripping, we'll make socks that fit, And helmet and sweater and also a mitt.

No true American is shirking his bit, So that's why the women are learning to knit; With patience and practice we'll make a good fit, Of helmet and sweater, sock, muffler and mitt. —Subscriber.

The freighter Juneau is in port today and will take out a cargo of copper ore.

Under advices from the federal government, Rene L'Huilier, who has been held at the Fairbanks jail for some time past, will be released on parole. He is a native of Alsace-Lorraine, and was taken into custody at Nenana last summer for alleged disloyal utterances.

Word has been received at Juneau that Frank Nooney, a young man of Ketchikan, has passed a perfect examination for the naval service, obtaining a percentage of 100 in all branches. Mr. Nooney is a son of Jas. Nooney, a guard at the federal jail at Ketchikan.

Next month the final surveys will be made of the townsites of Haines and Douglas by the surveying division of the land office, under the supervision of J. P. Walker. The boundaries of the towns have already been laid out and the present work will consist of the subdivision of the townsite into lots.
