PULP INDUSTRY AN ACCOMPLISHED FACT

The wood pulp industry in Alaska has ceased to be a mere hope. It is here—an accomplished fact. Alaska is making wood pulp and shipping it.

And this is but the beginning of this industry. There will be many such plants as that at Speel river in the near future, and in addition we may expect great paper mills at an early date to make finished paper from the wood pulp.

The development of the pulp business in southeastern Alaska should bring more people here in the end to make permanent homes than have the mining and fishing industries.

Let the good work go on.—Juneau Empire.

KEEP A-SCRATCHIN'

Students of political economy have fairly grown hoarse telling the world at large that the so-called "quietness" prevailing in industry and its corollaries is purely psychological; that while, it is true, a certain readjustment and shaking down is in progress, there is no reason why the end of it should not be hastened by optimistic action suited to the thought.

Times there are indeed when worms are scarce, the rooster finds, yet he keeps right on a-scratching. The fact that he cannot find a worm in the first few minutes of his work merely whets his determination to work all the harder.

Never a rooster that ever quit so long as he had a scratch in him. But how different with humans when the gossips of the business barnyard say that the worms are scarce and hard to find.

The Biblical injunction of "go to the aunt," when in need of inspiration to be industrious, might very well be paraphrased to include our well-known barnyard friend in the present case.

THINGS WE THINK

Things Others Think and What We Think of the Things Others Think.

Your neighbor's affairs are nothing to speak of.

It's easy to be foolish as it is foolish to be easy.

No need to ask what some men do for a living. They do their friends.

A man who doesn't know his own mind still thinks that others should know it.

You may not be able to do great things but you can at least try to do the small things in a great way.

Everybody wants to do something for the poor chorus girl, but where are you going to find a poor one?

It's a wise child that knows its own mother in these days of rouge, short skirts and high heels.

There is only one crowd of fellows who ever made a living following the horses and they are the cab drivers.

Many a guy who is an expert at operating a park rowboat with his leg in it, is a poor navigator when he gets on the sea of matrimony.
