Mondell's Jinx Is Persistent

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, is shown in recent Washington photographs to be getting about on crutches, with one foot in bandages. It has been an unlucky summer—in a way—for the majority floor leader in the house.

Last June, soon after returning to his home in Wyoming, the Wyoming legislator took to playing farmer. He quit abruptly—at least for a time—when he fell from a haystack. The haystack was big and high and he fell hard. The result was two broken ribs.

Then in October Mr. Mondell's official between session activities took him to the Shoshone dam, in Wyoming, on the Cody entrance to Yellowstone national park. Here his jinx rolled a boulder down on him. This time the result was a broken leg.

As is well known, it is hard to keep a good man down, and November found the Republican floor leader back in Washington getting ready for the opening of the regular session scheduled to begin early in December. He was on crutches, but was getting along nicely, thank you.

But his jinx had not yet finished with him. The night of November 23 he was hoisting himself up the front steps of his home when one of his crutches broke. In consequence Mr. Mondell got a severe fall—severe enough to lay him up in bed for several days.

It is reported that the jinx is still active, as there are fears that the bone, set last October, will have to be rebroken and reset.

Bianchi's Diplomatic "Break"

Senator Moses of New Hampshire, a member of the foreign relations committee, introduced a resolution in the senate the other day which seems to contain large possibilities of interesting reading. The resolution set forth all sorts of trickery and bad faith by the government of Guatemala in dealing with Estrada Cabrera, the dictator who was deposed by revolution last April, and called upon the secretary of state to transmit to the senate such information as he might possess on the subject.

And then, to emphasize matters, Dr. Julio Bianchi (portrait herewith) minister of Guatemala to the United States, made a bad break—which is to say, was guilty of undiplomatic procedure—in going to see Senator Moses about it, instead of going to the state department. Ministers have been recalled, you see, for things like this.

According to a memorandum accompanying the senate resolution, the agreement guaranteeing Cabrera good treatment was drawn up at the American legation. He was to be lodged in the military academy and his property was to be safeguarded. The memorandum asserts he is in a common jail, and that he has been stripped of $15,000,000 of property, even to his false teeth.

Sixty Years to Pay War Debts

Senator Watson of Indiana (portrait herewith) advocates extension of time for the payment of the war debt over a period of 60 years. He urges that to lighten the tax burden. Repeal of the excess profits tax and reduction of the surtaxes on large incomes also are urged by him.

Senator Watson's declaration for the extension of the time for payment is presumably significant as showing a decided drift of opinion among the Republican leaders. It has been the program of the treasury department to pay up the war debt within 25 years.

Anyway, Senator Watson discussed the tax situation following his return from a conference at Philadelphia with Senator Penrose. The Pennsylvania senator is chairman of the finance committee. It was Senator Watson's opinion that hearings on either tax or tariff legislation should start soon after the hearing on the special session is called under the new administration.

Representative Longworth of Ohio, favors repeal of the excess profits tax and the substitution of a tax on undistributed profits of corporations. He says he will not believe congress will approve a sales tax.
